

Imagine your first day of school: You sit down for class, open your book, and your teacher starts to speak ... in French.

You don't speak French, and neither do your classmates, but the teacher keeps going. He lectures on history, geography, science, math and reading. He doesn't break into English once.

Now imagine every teacher in your school does that, every day, every year. And when you finally drop out, imagine they blame it on you.

For children throughout Chad, that nightmare school is their only chance at an education.

But it doesn't have to be.

Watch now to discover how you can help children in Chad learn to read in their own language.
