Central Michigan Life invites all locals and media to listen and converse with UN Ambassadors from the United States, North Korea and Mexico. The debate will take place on Friday February 23, in Central Michigan Life's news office.

The following two topics will be open for discussion and debate.

Member States have mandated the Secretary-General and the UN System to help them achieve the standards set out in the UN Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Discussing the different human rights movements in each country, how effective they have proven to be, and how to improve and be on the same page or meet one another halfway with progress.

The United Nations is a universal global organization that addresses issues to safeguard peace, protecting human rights, establishing the framework for international justice, and other issues that transcend national boundaries and cannot be solved by one country alone. They have also engaged in a wide array of activities to improve people's lives around the world.
