If there is any one that knows how to throw an epic, unforgettable party, it's definitely the Gotstyle team. Whether you're riding solo or you're coupled up, 21 Trinity Street was the place to be on Valentine's Day. Although Gotstyle has hosted many incredible parties before, they took this one to the next level.

In case you didn't get the join the party, I'll give you all the visuals. The start of the night introduced love and relationship coach as well as author, Chantal Landreville and the launch of her new book, "Raise Your Love Signal.". If you're curious to learn more, pour yourself a nice glass of whatever your heart desires and find the book here, <https://raiseyourlovesignal.com/book-landing-page/>.

As the night progressed, the DJ was bringing all the beats as more guests started to arrive. They also had the choice of wearing a name tag incase they became lovestruck during the event. Whether they wanted to wine about their love life or mend their broken hearts with some gin, they had five open bars to choose from.

There was also a massive chocolate fountain surrounded by five mouthwatering treats for dipping. So if you did come to the party hopefully you didn't miss that. Whether you wanted a picture with the squad or just you and your sweetie, the shimmery red photo booth with fun props was the place to do that.

Photographers circled through the store capturing the floating cupid, laughter, bonding and candid moments which you can find at <https://gotstyle.com/pages/wine-about-love>. Also captured was the tarot card reader because who doesn't love hearing fun predictions about their future? Last but not least, the surprise late night delivery of McDonald's cheeseburgers is what did it, thanks to owner, Melissa.

Sponsors of this lovely night included: Brother's Bond Bourbon, Empress 1908 Gin, Campari, Smartwater, Celebrity Matchmaker Carmelia Ray, Cave de Lugny wine and last but certainly not least, Gourmet Desserts by Lorelyn Martin.

Needless to say, it was a sweet, savoury and boozy night.
