

Attunix is becoming Redapt

What you can expect during the transition

The two companies
combine officially in September 2019.

We're thrilled to announce an exciting change that will allow us to expand our cloud services and provide more real solutions to people in need of creative, effective problem-solving for their business.

What Does this Change Mean?

New expertise

We're joining forces to form a single company that brings our years of experience in engineering cloud business solutions to Redapt's leading position in hardware systems integration.

New look

Since our acquisition by Redapt in 2018, we've been working on integrating our processes with theirs. As we take the final steps toward fully merging, we're also changing our name and logo to Redapt

New capabilities

We'll also be expanding our services and capabilities, bringing on more talent to scale with our vision for the future. Our plan is to broaden Redapt's cloud implementation offerings and our work in Azure, engineering new and innovative custom solutions for a constantly evolving marketplace.

How Does this Affect You?

The answer: not much

We'll ensure that this transition is seamless for you. In fact, your point of contact won't even change; they'll just be using a Redapt email address instead.

Same dedication

We're still dedicated to getting to know each client, forming an in-depth understanding of the work, and helping them overcome their obstacles so that they can focus on what matters. Only now we'll be able to provide even support while we do it.

More productivity

We can't wait to work with you again in the future as Redapt. We're here to make an impact on the way you do business -- helping you to be more productive in ways that fit your processes, culture, and goals -- using the convenience and power of the cloud.
