

Ball State Women's Golf wins the Brittany Kelly Classic

The Cardinals take home their first win of the season today in Yorktown

MUNCIE, Ind.--- Ball State Women's Golf got their first win of the season this year at The Players Club in Yorktown. The Cardinals place 1st out of 13th and have two players in the top 10 with Kiah Parrott finishing 2nd behind Dasa Urbankova of the University of Chicago Illinois. This win for the Cardinals wasn't just the first win of the season but also the first win for 2nd-year Head Coach Cameron Andry. "Winning is tough, I just told the team winning is hard no matter what the field looks like. Something that we didn't do at all last year and to do it on our home course and get the first win of the season is a really good feeling".

Although this was the first win of the season for BSU it wasn't their first match. The Cardinals played in The Boilermaker Classic two weeks ago on September 4th and 5th, they placed 14th out of 15th. Improvement is key for the Cardinals though as they were better this week by 44 strokes and look to take that momentum into next week as they head to Vail, Colorado for the Redsky Golf Week Challenge hosted by Redsky Ranch Golf Club and Golfweek magazine. “Right now we’re just enjoying this victory” says Coach Andry, he also adds “We’ll take a day off we’ll get refocused and get prepared for Colorado”. Senior from Kokomo, Indiana Kiah Parrott says “Stick to a plan, whatever you do for this tournament (Brittanny Kelly Classic in Yorktown) do the same thing for the next tournament no matter whether it’s here, Purdue, or in Colorado”. As the Cardinals continue to soak in the victory from this week they turn right around next week and try to come back out on top for their second win of the season.
