COM600F

All-in-one automation controller

Distribution automation controller COM600F is a versatile component in utility and industrial solutions. The controller performs the combined roles of user interface (web-based HMI), communication gateway, and automation platform in a single physical unit. Applications such as auto-generated, self-healing networks and automatic transfer schemes are available. The COM600F is an affordable and flexible device that reduces operational costs and ensures efficiency of power distribution and operations.
