Hey Anne,

This back to school season, we're envisioning a new kind of world. A world where kids are intrigued by their environments—intrigued enough to ask the difficult questions.

A world where kids are inspired to design their own learning paths in pursuit of answers to these questions.

Does this sound like a world you want to be a part of?

Jumpstart your school year by facilitating some brainstorming sessions. Get an idea of what your children and youth are thinking about with these starter questions:

- What social issues do you see impacting you and your community?
- What world issues are you concerned about?
- What really matters to you? How can you make a difference?
- Where in the world would you like to visit and learn about the culture?
