Great Design, Set in Stone

By Nissa Hallquist

In 1983, Cliff Wylie started an interior design and floor covering business in his garage. From such humble beginnings, he couldn't have imagined the twists and turns that would eventually make his company, Ware House Interiors, the go-to destination for fine kitchen and bath designs and remodels in Orangevale and the greater Sacramento area.

A Solid Foundation

Word of mouth and long-lasting, dedicated partnerships with ceramic tile and natural stone manufacturers have been at the heart of Ware House Interiors' success. But all of it is actually based on a literally strong foundation: granite.

The specialty of Ware House Interiors is granite, namely the fabrication and installation of granite countertops and other hard surfaces. As a countertop surface, granite really came into its own in the mid-1980s. And, while certain colors and patterns may ebb and flow, as a counter material in general, granite's popularity has yet to wane. To this day, it is seen as luxurious and durable; a one-of-the-kind centerpiece for modern kitchens and bathrooms.

Of course, other natural stone and manufactured stone products have also become popular choices as countertop, flooring and other hard surface materials. So, Ware House Interiors happily offers a wide selection of quartz, solid surface and other such products, as well as granite and a large catalogue of ceramic tile flooring.

Expertise Meets State-of-the-Art Technology

Next to the updated array of materials they offer, so too has Ware House Interiors recently updated their fabrication processes. Today, their skilled fabricators are able to enhance their personal touch with the precision of advanced CNC equipment.

Digital templating allows the designers and fabricators to measure and cut brand-new countertops in a fraction of the time that it used to take. And it allows the process to happen without needing to tear out a homeowner's old countertops first. That way, a homeowner doesn't have to be without a functional kitchen for any longer than is absolutely necessary.

Success, Even in Hard Times

There's no question that the pandemic has resulted in economic struggles for many businesses all around the country. Yet, Ware House Interiors continues to succeed and was actually able to open a brand-new showroom recently in Orangevale. This large, modern space showcases a vast array of granite, ceramic tile, and other hard surfaces, as well as all kinds of cabinetry, hardware and fixtures.

How is this possible, during these challenging times? According to Cliff, it's a combination of his company's can-do spirit and family ties, as well as the important contributions of partners like Daltile and Burton Tile. And then referrals, good word of mouth and awards for excellence (including the Orangevale People's Choice Award for Contractor of the Year in 2019) have kept the customers coming. Cliff takes none of it for granted.

A love for design and new and improved materials offer endless inspiration for Cliff and his team. But what really keeps Cliff and Ware House Interiors going after so many years is the look on a client's face when they see their new kitchen or bath, and knowing that they helped turn someone's house into a home.

Ready to turn your kitchen or bathroom into the updated space of your dreams? Stop by the new Ware House Interiors showroom at 9357 Greenback Lane #3 in Orangevale to see the possibilities. What Homeowners Should Know Before Coming into the Ware House Interiors Showroom

As little or as much as they need to, according to company president Dawn Williamson. When a potential client comes into Ware House Interiors, it's up to Cliff or Dawn to walk them through the entire process, from design concept to completion.

What does this mean? Homeowners may have a rough idea of colors they like, the kind of appliances they want or just that they want their kitchen or bathroom updated. Ware House Interiors can take it from there.

Cliff and Dawn help homeowners make the design choices they need to meet their aesthetic and functional needs. This often means Cliff goes to a client's house in-person to take measurements and observe how the homeowner uses their space. From there, Dawn oversees the entire design and construction process, including scheduling sub-contractors, to bring the homeowners' design and material choices to life.

So, you can start with a pretty complete picture of what your new kitchen or bath will look like, or not have any idea at all when you walk through the doors of the Ware House Interior's showroom. Either way, you will end up with the updated space you want and need.
