If you need to feel better and see some real human kindness, come hang out with our security guys after school. As the kids come in for our afternoon activities, Jimmy high-fives every one. And he talks to them and cares. "How was your day?" he asks. "It's the weekend! Your brain gets to rest!" he says to those who look tired. One young girl comes in clearly on the verge of tears. "It's gonna be ok," he tells her. The kids look up. They look at his kind face and right into his eyes, as teens are sometimes reluctant to do. They feel seen. They smile, or even laugh. Jimmy may be the best thing that happens to them all day.
