

Magical music

Claudia Winkleman is back meeting astonishingly talented pianists who are making commuters stop in their tracks playing in train stations. Listening in will be acclaimed musicians Lang Lang and Mika. And Claudia, 52, who says she's not musical at all, admits she is still blown away by the reactions. "It was amazing for me to watch everyone rushing through the stations and then stopping as soon as someone started playing the piano. I was blown away by the power of it." We'll also get to catch up with last year's winner Lucy, soon, in The Incredibly Talented Lucy. This new documentary follows winner Lucy, who is blind and neurodiverse, and the way she communicates through music with the help of her piano teacher, Daniel. ● The Piano, Sunday 28 April, Channel 4

Turning point

We are joining Bon Jovi as they reconsider their future while singer Jon deals with a vocal injury which could end his career in a new four-part documentary series. As well as being there with the group at their most vulnerable moment, we are treated to 40 years of personal videos, unreleased early demos, original lyrics, and never before seen photos. ● Thank You, Goodnight: The Bon Jovi Story, Friday 26 April, Disney+

NEW THIS WEEK

Challengers FILM

Game, set, match! Tennis coach Tashi is married to a champion on a losing streak, so to get him back on form, she enters him into a low-level pro tournament. However, things take a turn when he finds himself facing his former best friend and Tashi's ex, Patrick. As tensions run high, Tashi must ask herself: what will it cost to win?

SEASONAL CHEF

Get ready to spend the year with Jamie Oliver as we start an extended series split into four parts to take us through spring, summer, autumn and winter 2024. Beginning with spring, Jamie creates inspiring recipes using ingredients which are currently in season and can be grown at home. ● Jamie Cooks Spring, Monday 29 April, Channel 4

FILM

Tomorrow's Freedom

Documenting the life and imprisonment of Marwan Barghouti, this moving film highlights his fight for freedom alongside the plight of the Palestinians through archive footage and interviews. Dubbed by many as "the Palestinian Nelson Mandela", could Barghouti be the key to peace in the Middle East?

You Are Here by David Nicholls (Sceptre)

Marnie is stuck working alone in her London flat and often feels like life's passing her by. Michael is increasingly reclusive, reeling from his wife's departure. After they're brought together, they suddenly find themselves alone on the most epic of walks which proves that sometimes you need to get lost to find your way...

BOOK

SCOOP?

Josh Widdicombe and Nish Kumar are zigzagging the UK working on local newspapers in a mission to fine great stories which would make the front page. The boys are determined to do a lot better than they did last time – let's not forget Nish's attempt to chase Boris Johnson down in Blackpool! ● Hold The Front Page, Wednesday 24 April, Sky Max and NOW

Ten years on...

It's a decade since we met people fighting unconventional demons in My Strange Addiction. Now we are returning to find out how they are coping. And we meet others who need to overcome their often unsafe habits, including obsessive urine drinking and eating cat hair. Friends and family plea for them to get help and medics explain exactly how these addictions are harming their health. ● My Strange Addiction: Still Addicted?, Wednesday 24 April, Really

GLITTER'S CRIMES

Paul Gadd – better known as Gary Glitter – was an iconic performer in his heyday but was later exposed as a predatory child abuser. Weaving together historical victim testimony and interviews with those who met Glitter on the showbiz circuit and lawyers involved in both the prosecution and defence, this is a portrait of a man who has continued to offend even after jail terms around the world. ● Glitter, Tuesday 23 April, ITV1

BOOK

An Ideal Husband by Erica James (Harper Collins)

After 30 years of marriage, Louisa is stunned when husband Kip asks for a divorce, as he has been secretly seeing a younger woman. Despite the betrayal, Louisa sets about making a new life for herself while Kip finds himself facing challenges and begins to learn that living the dream may not be as simple as he thought...

The Other Tenant by Lesley Kara (Penguin)

When Marlow accepts a position as a live-in property guardian, she finds herself moving somewhere she swore she'd never return to. One of the other tenants has disappeared, and Marlow suspects that the nine other guardians know more than they're letting on. Can she uncover the truth before her past catches up with her?

BOOK

Words: Caroline Blyth, Amber Connolly, Danielle Lett and Amy Rowland. Photos: Channel 4, Sky, ITV, Disney, Discovery