Understanding the Legal Process for Personal Injury Cases

The process for every personal injury case is different depending on the unique circumstances of your specific accident. Thus, our College Park accident lawyer will begin by consulting with you on the specifics of your accident and your injuries. They will determine if your case has merit, what the best next steps are for your case, and the amount of compensation that makes sense to seek based on your accident and injuries.

After this initial consultation, your lawyer will investigate your case. This includes gathering evidence such as police and witness reports, any photographs or videos of the accident, and medical reports detailing the extent of your injuries. This evidence is used to prove liability in the at-fault party in your case and to prove that your injuries were a result of the accident caused by the at-fault party's negligence. Once a case has been built, your lawyer will file a lawsuit on your behalf against the party responsible for the accident.

Your lawyer will then represent you in all negotiations and hearings, advocating for you and for the full and fair amount of compensation that you are owed. Oftentimes, a personal injury case can be settled before going to court. Your lawyer will negotiate with the defendant's lawyers or insurance company, seeking to reach a settlement that adequately covers your losses.

If a fair settlement cannot be reached during negotiations, your case may go to trial. Your lawyer will represent you throughout the trial, working to prove liability and display the full extent of your losses as well as the necessary compensation that you deserve.

Compensation in Personal Injury Cases

Compensation received after an accident also varies based on the specifics of your case. Our College Park accident lawyer will work with you to determine the amount of compensation you are owed. The severity of the accident and the extent of your injuries and losses will determine this amount. Usually, compensation for losses such as medical bills, rehabilitation and therapy, lost wages, property damage, and pain and suffering can be recovered after an accident. Other losses that are specific to your case may also be compensated if it can be proven they were a result of your accident.
