

The Best Places To Go Sightseeing in Tokyo

Have you wanted to spend a day out of the ordinary? With summer just around the corner, Tokyo is a must-visit destination. Tokyo is on Japan's largest island, Honshu. There are endless sightseeing adventures you could partake in in Tokyo.

This article will help you plan your trip to Tokyo with ease.

Mount Fuji

Depending on your budget, sightseeing in Tokyo could range from exciting to extremely interesting. Depending on your mode of transport, it could take you three hours to get to Mount Fuji from Tokyo. However, the advantage is that there are various ways to get there.

The Japanese believe that Mount Fuji is Sacred. Visiting Mount Fuji could help you appreciate Japanese culture. The mountain's peak is also stunning since the hill was once an active volcano. It has a height covered in snow, which makes the place radiate peacefulness. If you visit during summer, you will have an opportunity to climb the mountain as well.

Lake Kawaguchi

Just next to Mount Fuji is Lake Kawaguchi, which gives a great angle from which to view the famous Mount Fuji. The area boasts a clear blue sky, a cool breeze, and beautiful cherry blossoms that are generally pink and smell almost like roses. The Japanese commonly refer to them as sakura. The flowers are edible and do have nutritional value. If you take a cruise ship ride, you can see a reflection of Mount Fuji in the clear blue water of the lake. One must-do activity is to take a photo with the background of Mount Fuji. Remember to order Sakura blossom tea once you get there.

Tokyo imperial palace

In the middle of Tokyo is the famous imperial palace. If you are attracted to the historical aspects of countries, there is a museum just around there. The imperial palace also has guided tours with tour guides who explain the castle's origins. However, entering the palace is only allowed twice a year. What would be better than sightseeing in an area with a beautiful landscape surrounded by expansive garden parks? Stroll under the shade of various trees, admiring nature and meditating. The site is also suitable for exercises like taking a jog. I can guarantee that you will leave the place feeling refreshed.

Momiji corridor

Do you love flowers? If you do, then you must visit the Momiji corridor. Sightseeing in Tokyo will only be complete if you see this famous tunnel. Every tourist loves photos, and you should take several around the tunnel. The Japanese celebrate the autumn leaves festival in the Momiji corridor. The magnificent sightseeing happens at night when the passage lights up.

Sightseeing from Tokyo sky tree

Once you get to Tokyo, going to the sky tree takes less than an hour. They are platforms inside the sky tree designed to help you view Tokyo from above. The tower might trigger goosebumps. A glass layer covers the floor, which means you can see below your feet, but it's worth a try. Suppose you get a glimpse of the tower from the outside. In that case, there is a scenic view when the building lights up at night, illuminating different colors.

Tokyo is a must-visit tourist destination not for leisure activities but for sightseeing. If you ever go sightseeing in Tokyo, remember to bring a good camera to capture memories.
