

From: The University of Chicago collegeadmissions@uchicago.edu
Subject: Milk-Shakespeare?
Date: April 24, 2018 at 3:13 PM
To: ckinghagen@uchicago.edu

TU

Dear Yaneli,

In fair Chicago, where we lay our scene,
You spot on the quads preparing a set,
Performers, the student-run men of Dean,
For Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.
What better on a bright spring afternoon
Than outdoor theater and campus in bloom?
Only watching with a milkshake in hand
Your $1 treat bought just beforehand.

Two hours, one milkshake, and one world-famous tragedy later, you're feeling inspired to indulge your own artistic side. As the afternoon wanes, you stroll south and admire the sunset. But soft! What light through yonder window breaks? On the other side of the midway, a soaring form of stone and glass emerges over the trees. This is the Logan Center for the Arts, the central hub of the arts at UChicago that houses playwrights and painters, musicians and filmmakers, dancers, sculptors, and their professors.

As you walk into the Logan Center's expansive foyer, you're faced with a lot of choices. Will you head to the black box theater or the woodworking studio? The Hack Arts Lab—a digital fabrication facility with 3D printers, laser cutters, and microcontroller workbenches—or the gorgeous open-air terrace seminar room? The film vault, Café Logan, or the 11th-floor penthouse (with this view)?

Whatever your artistic poison, UChicago has you covered. With a campus culture rich in artistic achievement—including being the birthplace of improvised comedy and home to more than 60 arts-based student organizations like Commuknity, a group that promotes needlecraft and artistic expression; Men in Drag, an all-female a cappella group; and Rhythmic Bodies in Motion, UChicago's largest dance student organization that puts on an annual spring showcase and features a wide variety of dances—you won't have to look far to find a sense of artistic energy and community.

So grab a milkshake and come join us on the quads. For never was an arts scene more aglow, than here on campus at UChicago.

All the best,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads 'Katie Quille Chaszczewski'.

Katie Quille Chaszczewski
Senior Associate Director of Admissions
Director of Undergraduate Outreach

The University of Chicago | Office of College Admissions

1101 E. 58th Street • Chicago, IL 60637
Telephone: 773.702.8650 • Fax: 773.702.4199
© 2018 University of Chicago

The University of Chicago accepts the Common Application and Coalition Application.

This email was sent to yanelimart.g@gmail.com by "The University of Chicago" <collegeadmissions@uchicago.edu>.
Unsubscribe from The University of Chicago.