Adam, we pointed out over the last month how two-factor authentication (2FA) is a critical step in protecting your company from cyber-attackers who can take advantage of big holes in single-factor authentication methods.

It's not just a smart move to implement 2FA—more often, it's becoming a compliance requirement. GlobalSign customer South East Water in the UK faced such a mandate: they had to start using 2FA to compete in a new market.

GlobalSign helped South East Water roll out certificate-based authentication. It worked so well that they decided to migrate all their SSL certificates under our PKI management solution. Read about it in our case study.
