

Subject: And a thousand students breathed a sigh of relief!

Hey April!

Thank you so much for signing up for our upcoming Inspiring Teacher webinar this Thursday!
We can't wait to meet you and–

Wait!

Shhhhh...

Do you hear that?

That's the sound of students around the United States collectively breathing a heavy sigh of relief.

Because for merely spending a couple of hours with us, we're going to arm you with techniques that you can begin to use immediately to better manage your classes and your overall teaching experience.

We understand that it might not feel like a big deal right now, but it is!

By signing up you've realized that the classroom management techniques you were "taught" while getting your certification weren't up to snuff.

Heck, we had a teacher named Carol who literally broke down and cried in the middle of her 4th-grade art class because she didn't know how to stop her students from slinging Play-Doh at each other.

"I was taught how to make a decent art lesson for the students, but I was never taught how to keep little Tyler from yelling at me because he's having a bad day," Carol told us.

Now some teachers might say, "Well, if it wasn't taught to me during my certification, it must not be important."

But you are NOT one of those teachers, April...

Joining us for our webinar proves that you want to adapt and grow with your kids. You want to learn how to see things from the student's perspective and teach accordingly.

In other words, you want to learn how to INSPIRE them.

So make sure to bring your notebook on Thursday. We have five teachers with over 40 years of experience between them ready to help you.

A LOT of things are going to be covered which include:

- Becoming more organized and creating a teaching plan you can use across different classes
- Avoiding the dreaded “teacher burnout”
- Improving your communication skills and having real conversations with your students
- How to admit you are wrong with humility and thereby earn more respect from the class
- Commanding respect and discipline on the first day with something we call “The First Day Forecast”
- How to get along better with admin (VERY important)

That’s all for now, April. We’ll see you this Thursday at 2pm! Just click the link below and you’re good to go!

P.S.: By the way, we do realize that you might have signed up for this webinar on a whim.

You know, just as a “I might pop in if I don’t have anything better to do,” kind of deal.

We get it. We’ve all done it.

But this is the real deal, April. This is one of those rare opportunities that will completely alter the course of your teaching career for the better.

Can you imagine walking into your classroom and your students are not only HAPPY to see you but are also eager to learn?

Don't think it's possible? Let us show you!
