

Fontaines D.C announce a new album ahead of huge festival performances this year

Fontaines D.C have announced their fourth album 'Romance', alongside an announcement of their tour of the UK and Ireland later this year.

Fans of Fontaines D.C can cancel the countdown for new music, as the Irish born five piece have announced their newest album 'Romance' being released this summer. The band have stated they are moving away from the Irish "diaspora" that enveloped their previous hit album 'Skinty Fia', and are instead holding a lens to romanticism.

They've come a long way since their debut album 'Dogrel' which permeated the Irish music scene with wonders such as 'Boys in the Better Land' and 'Liberty Belle'. Following this was 'A Hero's Death', and 'Skinty Fia' which moved away from the band's focus on Irishness and focused on detachment. Their aims of constructing idealism and romance are becoming transparent as they're displaying the brilliant journey of the band's sound through their albums which only get better.

In addition to their new album, the post-punk band spontaneously released a new disco-rock single 'Starbuster', along with a 2000s-esque music video, which does not disappoint. With 100k streams in two days, it seems there should be much excitement for the remaining album that will undoubtedly rock the charts.

After growing their fame through slots at huge festivals nationally and globally, such as Glastonbury, Reading and Leeds and Rock en Seine, the big shot band are releasing their new album 'Romance' August 23rd, just in time for festival season and only one day before their second appearance at Reading and Leeds festival. The anticipated album follows the wildly successful 'Skinty Fia', released in 2022 and taking them across the world and charts.

To add to the eagerness for the album, Fontaines D.C have released a tour in support of the new album, organising performances across the UK and Ireland that are likely to sell out quickly. Support for their tour is from the fantastic DIIV and Sorry, enhancing what is already shaping up to be an exciting year for the band and their fans. Those who want tickets can pre-order the album to gain access to the presale, or try for tickets in the general onsale 26th April at 10am. However, if the desire to see them live is too great, listeners can see them at Glastonbury festival and Reading and Leeds festival, both of which are taking place later this summer, but tickets are selling fast so be quick!

Unsurprisingly, with their unique sound and shining talent, Fontaines D.C are pervading the music industry globally and it's clear that 2024 is shaping up to be a very exciting year for them. With festival slots, tours and albums, it's likely that 'Fontaines D.C' will become a household name.