

Who needs parks when you've got malls?

In middle eastern countries, where the heat burns the skin and temperature is not below 45°C these days, folks have found a cool (literally!) new spot for their daily strolls: the mall!

They said NO to scorching hot weather and melting their skins off and took their walks inside the comfort of malls

Air-con, endless corridors to wander, and bonus points for window shopping!

So, next time you're in these countries and see people power-walking past the shops, don't be surprised – they've just found a smart way to beat the heat and get their daily exercise in style.
