With the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) 2022 ruling on over-the-counter (OTC) hearing aids, there are more options than ever for purchasing hearing aids—at in-person hearing clinics, online, or from big-box retailers.

Jabra Enhance is an OTC hearing aid brand available online and from big-box retailers (Best Buy and Costco). All of its hearing aid support is available online and through mobile technology. If you're experiencing mild to moderate hearing loss and feel you're a good candidate for an OTC hearing aid, Jabra Enhance is a reliable brand to consider. Jabra has a reputation for quality and above-average customer reviews.

To help you find the best hearing aid on the market for your needs, we looked into how much Jabra Enhance hearing aids cost, whether insurance covers Jabra Enhance hearing aids, and you can determine if Jabra is a good hearing aid for you.

Why Jabra hearing aids are one of our top picks

Jabra Enhance hearing aids are one of our Reviews Team's top picks for the best hearing aids for several reasons.

First, Jabra Enhance offers OTC hearing aids for mild to moderate hearing loss, so you're not required to see a doctor or audiologist for a fitting. This can save you time and money since you're not obligated to visit an audiologist clinic. OTC hearing aids are often more affordable than prescribed hearing aids, are preprogrammed and ready to be used out of the box, and can be self-fitted and adjusted by the user at home.

Second, Jabra Enhance offers ongoing access to a team of professionals, including licensed hearing aid specialists and audiologists, for up to three years after purchase. Because the support is available only online, if you prefer to see a hearing professional in person, Jabra Enhance hearing aids may not be for you.

Finally, Jabra Enhance earned "Editor's Pick" on our Reviews Team's best hearing aids of 2024 review due to the company's combination of powerful hearing aids and ongoing customer service.

Additional information on the Jabra Enhance Select 300

The Jabra Enhance Select 300 model is among the brand's newer rechargeable Bluetooth-streaming hearing aids. These hearing aids' advanced technology offers clear, natural sound, including adaptive sound processing. This means the volume automatically adjusts to your environment, so you don't have to manually adjust frequently using your Jabra Enhance Select app. But if you prefer, you can still make adjustments using the app's environment settings.

You also get binaural directionality, a feature that helps process sound by combining inputs from both hearing aids. Working together, the hearing aids were designed to produce sound that is easily interpreted by the brain and sounds more natural to you while offering the best sound clarity and depth of all Jabra Enhance Select hearing aids.

The 300 model also offers automatic background noise suppression, so if you move from a quiet place to a noisy one, the hearing aids will sense the new noise level and reduce environmental sounds. It's one of just two models with hands-free calling, available with iPhones 11 and newer.

Like all Enhance Select models, it comes with a 100-day trial period and, with a premium package purchase, three years of remote adjustments through the Jabra Audiology Team on the app.

Additional information on the Jabra Enhance Select 500

If you're interested in discreet, lightweight, and comfortable hearing aids, the Enhance Select 500 could be a good fit. It's the brand's most compact and technologically advanced OTC model.

Starting at $1,795, it has a micro RIE design, which makes it much smaller than other models. It's the sides and behind, and offer advanced acoustics.

The charging case delivers up to 24 hours of listening on a single charge, and the Jabra Enhance Select 500 has a 100-day trial period.

Jabra Enhance Pro 20 from Costco

Starting at $1,599 per pair, Jabra has a prescription line of RIC hearing aids exclusive to Costco, called the Jabra Enhance Pro 20. In order to purchase these, you'll need a Costco membership, which starts at $60 per year.

Jabra Enhance Pro 20 hearing aids differ from the Jabra Enhance Select OTC hearing aids by addressing mild to profound hearing loss. These prescription hearing aids have rechargeable or disposable battery options, so you can choose what works best for you.

The Pro 20 model also has a different app, called the Jabra Enhance Pro app, which is available on both Apple and Google Play. The app lets you control volume, personalize your sound preferences by presetting your own programs, manage tinnitus (when you experience ringing or

About telecoil options

A telecoil is a small wire in a hearing aid that picks up sound from a loop system, which is a system that sends audio to your hearing aid, so you can hear better during events or in crowded places. You can find loop systems integrated into your phone, in concert halls, at airports, or in places of worship.

Enhance Select models do not include a telecoil. Many hearing aid brands choose to sacrifice telecoil technology to keep prices low. A telecoil can be a costly feature requiring a bigger device to fit the wire, so you won't find it in completely-in-canal (CIC) or invisible-in-the-canal (IIC) models.

But hearing aid technology continues to advance. Bluetooth features and smartphone controls, like environment settings that better filter sounds you want to hear, help improve sound quality in noisy places without the use of a telecoil.

Auracast technology may replace the need for telecoils in the future. The Select 500 and Pro 20 are two of the first hearing aids on the market that have Bluetooth Low Energy and Auracast technology.

How Jabra Enhance works

Jabra Enhance sells over-the-counter hearing aids, with the exception of the exclusive Jabra Enhance Pro 20, which is sold at Costco and can only be purchased with a prescription.

Jabra Enhance hearing aids are less expensive than other OTC competitors like Audicus (starting at $1,398 per pair) and Eargo (starting at $1,850 per pair). But they're still not as affordable as other OTC brands, like MDHearing (starting at $299 per pair).

Lively becomes Jabra Enhance

In fall 2022, Jabra, which is best known for its wireless earbuds, merged with the Lively hearing aid brand to create the Jabra Enhance line of hearing aids. Jabra Enhance is owned by the GN Group, a corporation that specializes in hearing and audio technology out of Denmark.

When the merger took place, Lively hearing aids were rebranded under the Jabra Enhance name:

- Lively Lite = Jabra Enhance Select 50R
- Lively Plus = Jabra Enhance Select 100
- Lively Pro = Jabra Enhance Select 300

Since then, Jabra Enhance has developed other hearing aid models, like the Enhance Select 500.

Jabra Enhance hearing aids start between $995–$1,995 per pair. If your main priority is Bluetooth streaming, Jabra Enhance is one of the most affordable hearing aids options on the market.

If Jabra hearing aids are out of your price range, there are ways to help cover costs, like asking insurance for partial coverage, searching for financing opportunities, or applying for alternative funding through local programs.

How to buy Jabra Enhance hearing aids

You can purchase Jabra Enhance Select online through the brand's website. If you're buying hearing aids directly from Jabra Enhance, you can pay using VISA, Mastercard, American Express, or Discover credit cards.

If you're looking to finance your hearing aids, you can apply through Bread, the company's financing partner, at checkout on the Jabra website. Jabra Enhance offers payment plans for each hearing aid. Depending on your terms and package option for the Select devices (basic or premium), here's a breakdown of monthly payments, beginning on the low end:

- Jabra Enhance Select 50R: Starts at $39–$46
- Jabra Enhance Select 300: Starts at $58–$65
- Jabra Enhance Select 500: Starts at $58–$65

Does insurance cover hearing aids?

While most insurance plans do not cover the full cost of hearing aids, terms vary by state and some private insurance providers may cover a portion, so it's always a good idea to check with your health insurance provider on your specific coverage. Common forms of coverage include:

- FSA or HSA: If you have a flexible spending account (FSA) or health savings account (HSA), the cost of hearing aids, batteries, repairs, and maintenance are considered medical expenses.
- If you're a veteran or military personnel, you may be eligible for hearing aid assistance or complete coverage through the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA). The VA will also cover medical services such as audiology for those who are eligible. Check with your assigned VA provider to verify your coverage.

How can I save money on hearing aids?

To save money on hearing aids, check with charitable foundations that help those who cannot afford hearing aids, such as the Hearing Aid Project, Miracle-Ear Foundations, or local Lions Clubs.

Another option to look into is your local area agency on aging to see what it can do to offer support. Finally, visit NCOA's Benefits CheckUp to learn more about benefits that may be available in your area.

Jabra Enhance and Jabra Enhance Select apps

The app you use to support your hearing aids depends on the model you purchase. The Jabra Enhance Select app is used for the Jabra Enhance Select 500, 300, and 50R hearing aids.

Jabra Enhance app

You can only download the Jabra Enhance app through the Apple store. The only exception is the Jabra Enhance Select 500, which is also available on Android.

These screenshots found through the Apple store show personalized sound features available with the Jabra Enhance app.

Jabra Enhance Select app

Jabra Enhance Select hearing aids are compatible with both iPhones and Android smartphones—you can download the Jabra Enhance Select app from the Apple store and the Google Play store.

The app connects to Jabra Enhance Select 500, 300, and 50R hearing aids, allowing you to optimize sounds depending on your environment. Unlike the Enhance app, the Enhance Select app gives you direct access to the Jabra Audiology Team, which means you can book appointments through the app if you need program adjustments or if you need to ask a professional about your hearing. If the Audiology Team determines you need an adjustment, they can program your hearing aids through the app, so you don't have to go to an audiology clinic.

Jabra Enhance accessories

Enhance Select hearing aids include a cleaning kit with a brush, cloth, eight domes of each size that comfortably fit the receiver to your ear canal, and a pack of wax guards that protect the hearing aid from ear wax buildup. If you need more care supplies, the Jabra care team can ship them at no extra cost to you for up to three years.

Jabra Enhance offers four main accessories for an additional cost: a TV Streamer, MultiMic, Phone Clip+, and the Enhance Select 100 Charging Case. All Jabra Enhance accessories include a 100-day money-back guarantee and a one-year warranty (excluding the charging case, which offers a three-year warranty).

- TV Streamer: For $299, you can purchase the TV Streamer, which uses Bluetooth to stream TV audio straight to your hearing aids from up to 22 feet away and works similarly to wireless headphones. To adjust TV volume and background noise, you use the Jabra Enhance and Jabra Enhance Select apps on your smartphone.
- MultiMic: For $275, you can purchase the MultiMic, which is a portable microphone that streams sound into your hearing aids, helping you to focus on conversations you want to hear during difficult listening situations. You can place it on a table to focus on voices during and places of worship.

- Phone Clip+: For $199, you can purchase the Phone Clip+, which connects via Bluetooth to most Android smartphones and older model iPhones, allowing you to stream calls and music to your hearing aids. This accessory clips to your clothing and doubles as a remote control for adjusting your hearing aid volume, answering calls, and muting the microphone. If you have an older iPhone or an Android that is not compatible with Jabra Enhance hearing aids, this device allows you to stream and control volume without the app, but you miss out on the app's features like remote fine-tuning.
- Charging Case: For $250, you can purchase an extra case to recharge your Enhance Select 300 hearing aids. A charging case is included with your hearing aid purchase, but some people may find it useful to have an additional case to have more freedom while away from home. The charging case will power your hearing aid batteries for 30 hours after a three-hour charge, 15 hours after a one-hour charge, or 2.5 hours after a 10-minute charge. Since the case also needs to be charged, two cases give you an additional source of power while one of the cases is charging. If you want additional charging cases for other rechargeable models, customer support states that you can order them over the phone, but you can't do so online.

Jabra hearing aid warranties, maintenance, and care

Warranties

If you purchase a premium package of the Jabra Enhance Select hearing aids, it comes with a three-year warranty, which includes one-time coverage for repair, loss, and damage. If you prefer to save $200, the basic packages only have a one-year warranty. The loss and damage policy does have a deductible, which means you'll have to pay up to the following amounts to receive new devices:

- Hearing aids: $195 per device
- Charging case: $175

If you're unhappy with your hearing aids during the trial period, you can return them and receive a full refund, including covered shipping costs. If the trial period has ended but you've only used your device for less than a year, you can still return them with documentation from your otolaryngologist or professional of similar profession under the Return Policy based on Medical Opinion section of the Terms and Conditions.

Maintenance and care

Your Jabra Enhance hearing aids should be cleaned at least once per week to make sure they're conducting sound at an optimal quality.

Never store your hearing aids in places that can get excessively hot or cold, like in the car. Try to keep your hearing aids and charging cases dry to extend their life. Jabra Enhance Select hearing aids are water resistant, so they are highly resistant to dust and dirt, as well as water damage when submerged up to 1 meter for 30 minutes. Although they can tolerate exposure to moisture, Jabra Enhance customer support does not encourage swimming or showering with them to further protect the electrical components.

Who are Jabra Enhance hearing aids for?

Jabra Enhance Select hearing aids are appropriate for adults 18 and older with mild to moderate hearing loss. Children or people with profound hearing loss will need a prescription hearing aid.

If you're unsure of which level of hearing loss you have, you can screen yourself using the Jabra free online hearing test.

Jabra Enhance online hearing test

To take the Jabra online hearing test, you will need a pair of headphones and a quiet environment. The test begins with questions about your hearing, such as “How would you rate your overall hearing ability without hearing aids?” and “Where do you have the most trouble hearing?”

A screenshot of the Jabra Enhance initial screening shows one of the questions you'll be asked when you take it.

You'll then be guided through different types of tones, with instructions to click the volume number until you can barely hear the tone, and again, until the tone is at a louder but comfortable volume. After taking the test, you may be asked to enter your first name, email address, and phone number to access your results. This prompt depends on your location.

Jabra Enhance challenges your hearing at different frequencies to understand your level of hearing loss.

Keep in mind an online hearing test is not diagnostic, unlike a professional in-person hearing exam with an audiologist. This means an online test cannot diagnose the cause of your hearing loss. If the test indicates you have hearing loss, a trip to the audiologist is always a good idea. For example, the results below indicate this person has significant hearing loss and may require further assessment by a hearing professional.

Jabra Enhance displays your level of hearing loss for each ear.

idea if you need to seek help from an audiologist. But on the other hand, online hearing tests are not calibrated and may not be very accurate. If there is anything going on around you, it may interfere with the test and can make it unreliable.”

According to the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, during an in-person consultation, an audiologist discusses your medical history and current hearing issues. They also look inside your ears to determine if obstruction, like earwax, is affecting your hearing. [1]

When one of our Reviews Team members attended a hearing exam at their local audiologist, she underwent many different tests to determine which frequencies were difficult to hear and how well sounds traveled through her ear. The entire exam (about 35 minutes) determines whether you suffer from hearing loss, the severity, and your best treatment options. “Make sure you see a reputable doctor with an ANSI (American National Standards Institute) calibrated sound booth who follows best practices,” said Sarah Lundstrom, Au.D., an audiologist at HearCare Audiology in Sarasota, Florida.

Lundstrom also explained some of the pros and cons of an in-person consultation. “In-person consultations are completed by an audiologist trained to give accurate results. They are a part of your medical record and you can request a copy to take home with you. The drawback with that is you will likely have to make an appointment, wait for the appointment, and travel to the location for the exam.”

If you're interested in finding an audiologist near you, visit the American Academy of Audiology, which hosts a directory and can provide you with information on location-specific clinics. And if you've already seen an audiologist and received a diagnosis, you can upload your audiogram to the Jabra Enhance website to be used for preprogramming your Jabra Enhance Select hearing aids.

Is a Jabra Enhance hearing aid an amplifier?

Jabra Enhance hearing aids are not amplifiers, also known as personal sound amplification products \(PSAPs\). If you do not have hearing loss and you want to amplify sound during certain

If you do have hearing loss, a hearing aid is appropriate. Amplifiers increase all sound, but they aren't FDA-regulated medical grade devices that allow you to adjust your hearing to your needs. If you're unsure which device is appropriate for you, consult with an audiologist.

What to consider before buying hearing aids

When you're looking to buy hearing aids, consider the following questions:

- What is your budget? For example, in our Reviews Team's best hearing aids review, we picked Audicus for “Best Budget-Friendly Bluetooth,” which is priced between $1,398–$2,598. This is less than most hearing aids with Bluetooth streaming, Jabra Enhance being the only exception in our reviews. For more budget-friendly options, see our review of the top affordable hearing aids.

hearing loss is in the severe to profound range, or if it's complex and needs specialized care, prescription hearing aids are more appropriate.

- Do you like simple or advanced technology? If you like advanced technology, our Reviews Team chose Oticon Own for “Most Advanced Smart Features.” The Oticon brand’s three largest models learn how to customize your sound experience uniquely to your needs using its Deep Neural Network feature. Unfortunately, if you prefer smaller hearing aids like invisible-in-the-canal (IIC) styles, they don’t have room to fit technology that can improve your hearing experience, including Bluetooth or adaptive features that adjust settings automatically to your environment.
- Do you prefer rechargeable or disposable batteries? Our Reviews Team picked the ReSound Omnia as the “Best Rechargeable” hearing aid, which offers up to 30 hours of battery life on one charge. Rechargeable batteries can save you up to $1,000 during the life of your hearing aids, since you’ll need to purchase new disposable batteries (about $20 for a 24-pack at Walgreens) every three to 10 days depending on usage.
- Do you have tinnitus or ringing in your ears? If you answered yes, the Widex Moment might be the best option for you. Our Reviews Team rated Widex “Best for Tinnitus” because it offers a therapeutic program called Zen Therapy to help you manage your symptoms.

Jabra Enhance hearing aid customer reviews

Jabra Enhance customer reviews reveal that Jabra hearing aids have a generally good reputation among users.

On Better Business Bureau \(BBB\), Jabra Enhance has a 3.4 out of 5 rating based on 19 customer reviews. Although many older reviews mention the old brand name (Lively), the hearing aids are still the same technology. Reviews are mixed on BBB, particularly in reference to customer support. Positive reviews praise customer support’s attentiveness, while some negative reviews disagree. Jabra Enhance is active on BBB in resolving complaints and responding to reviews.

respondents said their hearing aids didn't have enough features.

Bottom line

If you're looking for a pair of OTC hearing aids, Jabra Enhance offers one RIC model and two RIE models designed for mild to moderate hearing loss. If you need a pair of prescription hearing aids, Costco sells an RIC model that addresses mild to profound hearing loss. All Jabra Enhance hearing aids are Bluetooth compatible and cost less than $2,000, which is about half the price of the average pair of hearing aids. Our Jabra hearing aids review can help you choose the right OTC hearing aid.

Jabra Enhance hearing aids may be the right choice for you if:

- You're looking for a high-quality and affordable hearing aid with Bluetooth streaming capabilities
- You have mild to moderate hearing loss
- You want virtual support from a hearing aid specialist or audiologist

Jabra Enhance hearing aids may not be the right choice for you if:

- You have profound hearing loss or complex hearing needs that necessitate a prescription device
- You want features such as a telecoil (unless you purchase the MultiMic telecoil-equipped accessory for $275).
- You want in-person hearing consultations
- You dislike using smartphones to control your hearing aids
