ABOUT ME

FREELANCE
PHOTOGRAPHER

HANA
IBRAHIM

I am a photographer and video journalist with several years of experience working across humanitarian, social, and cultural contexts. My work sits at the intersection of visual storytelling, human rights, and community engagement. I have collaborated with international and local NGOs in media and communications, producing photo and video content for awareness campaigns, documentation, and advocacy. Alongside my fieldwork, I have worked as a fixer, freelance designer, and assistant director, supporting productions from concept development to execution. My practice is grounded in ethical storytelling, sensitivity to context, and a strong understanding of visual narratives that amplify underrepresented voices.
