What is the cheapest way to get internet at home?

Access from AT&T is a low cost home internet service available to eligible limited income AT&T Internet and AT&T Fiber households who participate in Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), Supplemental Security Income (SSI) for California residents, National School Lunch Program, or with a household income below 200% of federal poverty guidelines. Speeds on AT&T Internet depend on the maximum speed available at your location. Visit <https://www.att.com/internet/availability/> to check the speed available at your location.

The $30/mo. Access from AT&T plan available with internet speed plans up to 75 Mbps to 100 Mbps comes with unlimited monthly data. Eligible households whose maximum available speed available at their home is 10 Mbps or less and who don't need unlimited monthly data may qualify for a lower-priced offer. Eligible AT&T DSL customers can also qualify for the lower-priced Access from AT&T offer. AT&T fixed wireless internet and other wireless services are not eligible for Access from AT&T.
