<<First Name>>,

I believe that we are all called to be on mission with God. When Jesus departed from his followers, he left them with one mission: to make disciples of all nations. This was an assignment that Jesus gave not just to the present followers but to everyone who would follow him for the rest of time.

Here's the beautiful thing about this: God actually wants us to be on his team. If he wanted to, he could rend the heavens and send 10,000 angels to carry his message of hope, but he chooses to use the broken vessels of humanity to spend eternity with God. That means we get to do this; we don't have to.

God gives us the privilege to be on mission with him. For some of us that means that we share this hope with our neighbors right next door or the person we meet in the supermarket and for some of us that means we travel half-way across the world to take that message of hope to a people group who have never heard the name of Jesus before. If we follow Jesus, when God calls us to something, we must answer because of the command Jesus makes in Matthew 28 to go into the world and make disciples of everyone we come into contact with.

Right now, Jesus is extending an opportunity for each of us to be a part of building His Kingdom here on earth rather than building our own kingdom. Our own kingdom provides only temporary gain while building God's Kingdom leads to eternal impact. My prayer is that given the option, we all choose the path that leads to eternal impact and allows so many more people to be a part God's amazing gospel story.

As we head into Global Emphasis Sunday, my prayer is that you seek God and His Word and ask Him what part He's calling you to play. See you Sunday!

month. We believe in the power in prayer. It's been said that when people work, they work. But when people pray, God works. We are expectant for the ways God will move in our church and region when we intercede and pray together. Our next one is October 4 at 6:30 pm in the main auditorium. This environment is stripped back, unplugged, and intimate.
