Complex local, state, and federal regulations—along with varying definitions of hazardous waste—make it more challenging than ever to comply with the evolving waste landscape. Regulations governing sensitive material disposal (such as HIPAA, RCRA, OSHA, and MWMA) grow more stringent as enforcement increases.

These changes have resulted in escalating multi-million-dollar fines, costly corrective action plans, and public relations nightmares. Companies in multiple industries have made headlines due to settlements. Now is the time to renew focus on compliance and privacy programs.

Compliance Services

Trash Audits

The ENGIE Impact team audits trash samples pulled by site and provides reporting on regulated items, weights, and ratios.

Waste Assessment and Standardization Program(WASP)

Our on-site support assesses and standardizes your waste. Establish waste stations, remove excess bins, optimize container placement, right-size services, and deploy tailored signage and training (remote or in person).

Programmatic Field Audits

We provide post-settlement on-site support to ensure standardizations remain in place.

Prescriptive Waste Assessments

Post-WASP, ENGIE Impact provides extra on-site support to help reduce regulated items found in the trash.

The ENGIE Impact Difference

Our Compliance services help organizations proactively identify waste-related risks, document safeguards, and demonstrate due diligence across regulated waste streams. These services are critical for clients operating in highly regulated regions, such as California, Washington, or NYC. These services help clients reduce regulatory exposure related to sensitive materials and evolving requirements (e.g., HIPAA, RCRA, OSHA, state and municipal waste regulations). At the same time, we help create defensible documentation and actionable corrective strategies.

Why Partner With ENGIE Impact

For companies with a large distributed portfolio of sites, waste compliance can seem like a daunting task. Compliance requires extensive regulatory knowledge, waste auditing expertise, and credible reporting from a third party.
