Skinny jeans have been around for awhile, so it's nice to see something fresh being done with styling. One perfect example is the Cory Waxed skinny jean.

First, the fabric. It's waxed cotton. In the old days, waxed cotton was actually treated with wax, which was absorbed into the cotton fibers to repel water. It is still used in some traditional outerwear, but requires rewaxing every two years. No thank you.

These jeans have the luster of waxed cotton, but are machine washable on the synthetic setting. So you won't have to dunk them in paraffin to keep the look! The polished sheen of the cotton gives the jeans an upscale, professional appearance that will work at the office.

In addition to the wonderful fabric, the Cory Waxed jeans have lots of smart detailing that elevate them above the ordinary. The zip in in the back, leaving the front waistband in a smooth, uninterrupted line across the hips. Over each hip is a horizontal slash pocket that doesn't interfere with the side seams at all. There are also two discreet pockets in the back of the pants as well.

Detailed stitching adorns the waistband, side and ankle seams as well. The ankle each feature a zip as well. And the fit is glovelike.

The detailing on these jeans is so pretty that you'll want to show it off with a shorter blouse or sweater or a top that you can tuck in. (If there's too much extra fabric, forget it. These jeans are so fitted there will be no place to tuck in wads of silk without it showing.)

If you feel you're a bit bottom heavy and don't want to accentuate your hips and thigh, you can rock these jeans with a longer blouse or tunic that you belt to emphasize your waist. You needn't be pencil thin to wear skinny jeans attractively, but know your assets and choose your top accordingly.

There are many, many shoe options that will work beautifully with the waxed skinny jeans. For a more professional look, heeled pumps will work well. You may want to stick with a subdued color close to the color of your pants so that the eye isn't drawn to your fuchsia shoes, missing the rest of our outfit all together.

There are the skinny jeans you wear to run to the grocery, and they're great. The Cory Waxed skinny jeans are appropriate for the office or that presentation you'll be making. A great combination of popular style with polish.
