

CHARM HIS PANTS OFF

Need something to say when he asks, 'Where should we meet?' Here's how to nail the date-night pitch, and then nail him after

DIDN'T EVEN MAKE IT TO THE BLOODY BED!

A spring fling is nice in theory, tricky in practice. But not anymore...

With a new season upon us (good riddance, winter), we want to make sure that you're miles away from breaking point and are actually excited about the potential of getting it on this spring.

But even with all the enthusiasm you can muster, going in blind to the dating scene is not something we would ever recommend. Being able to whip out a top-notch date idea on the fly is something you need in your single-gal arsenal, so when that Tinder match asks you, 'What do you want to do?' you can hit them back with a plan so good they can't refuse.

To make sure that you're completely covered from start to cough finish, we've prepared a step-by-step guide on how to move from the date all the way to bedroom – keeping things on theme throughout, of course.

It's time to dive into spring dating and treat yourself to your most unforgettable season of sex yet... ➡

HIT THE ROAD, JACK

Whether or not your date is called Jack is completely irrelevant. Road trips are ridiculously romantic and give you a sense that you're the most spontaneous pair to ever hit the highway. Prepare a playlist for the journey that'll have you both singing so loud you'll have lost your voices before you even reach your destination.

Want to take things up a gear? Pull over in a quiet spot (no four-lane motorways, guys) and crack the windows just a smidge. This is the time you want to oh-so-subtly switch on your 'getting jiggy with it' playlist and pump it through the sound system. Then recline the front seats, or jump into the back, and get down to business.

A solid five minutes of foreplay should be enough to steam up your car windows so no one can see in, which we fully recommend as you don't want any surprise spectators. When you're getting close to the point where you both just want to jump on each other and go all the way, stop! Get back in the driving seat and force yourself to resist each other until you get back to a motel. It'll be the hottest thing ever because you'll be so eager to rip each other's clothes off the second you get in the door.

DINNER ROULETTE

There's nothing more romantic than a sexy man slaving over a hot stove to rustle you up a three-course meal – but what about making it something the both of you can do together? Hit the supermarket with your fella in tow and then divide as you reach the aisles. Both of you need to grab five items each before reuniting at the checkout and buying your goods. It then becomes your team challenge to cook up a feast together using your weird and wonderful ingredients! The cook-off will have you in stitches and you'll (hopefully) get a semi-decent meal out of it.

And what about dessert? We recommend picking up some pudding-esque products on the sly to surprise your date with after the feasting is complete. Yank out the chocolate, strawberries and whipped cream you sneakily stored in your cupboard and suggest a no-plate dessert course. Sell the saucy statement with serious confidence and he won't believe what's hit him!

Once you get the nod of approval, you have the chance to get really messy with one another. Play around with whipped cream in places that whipped cream should never naturally be, and tease each other with warm, melted chocolate, drizzled on every erogenous zone. You'll end your night truly satisfied in every sense of the word – trust us!

GET THINGS COOKIN' IN THE BEDROOM

WORDS BY KATIE STOW; STYLING BY ARIANA WEISMAM/THE WALL GROUP; PHOTOGRAPHY BY IAN MADDOX; MAKEUP BY ASHLEY DONOVAN/CELESTINE AGENCY; HAIR BY HAILEY ADICKES/CELESTINE AGENCY; MANICURE BY CHELSEA KING; PRODUCTION: FIRST SHOT PRODUCTIONS; ILLUSTRATIONS BY EIRIAN CHAPMAN

QUESTION TIME

If you have even one competitive bone in your body, you're going to love teaming up with your date and taking down the enemy at your local pub trivia. These nights are always filled with booze, bar food and a damn good opportunity to show off how brainy you are. Plus, if things go to complete sh*t, you can always ditch the quiz and go for a game of pool!

Before you ask how you can turn the night from trivia to 'take me now', don't worry, we have the perfect answer. As a little pre-date prep, gather together some suggestive and downright dirty questions and jot them on cue cards. Think questions like, 'What do you like in the bedroom?' or, 'What are your erotic fantasies?' Keep them in your back pocket until after the traditional trivia is over and save them for a sensual quiz on the walk home. Hand him half of the cards and begin asking each other the questions one by one. The sexual tension will be so extreme that you'll run, not walk, back to the bedroom.

FLICKER FEST

There's something wonderfully old school about going to the movies on a first date. Sure, it's kinda cheesy,

Beach, please

Rather than opting for a 45-degree beach date – guaranteed to leave you sweaty, sunburnt and half-naked with a stranger – go for a sunset beach picnic. Load up on bread, cheese and strawberries and relax on the sand as you watch the sun go down. If things go well surfside and you want to take it back to your beach shack, keep it cool and 'spontaneous' by suggesting a shower to wash off all that sand. Then when you're in the bathroom, you can kick-start a hot make-out session, tear off each other's swimmers, and hop into the shower together. PSA: If things start to heat up while you're still on the beach, take it back to your place ASAP. 'Cos while sex on the beach may be a delicious drink, it's also a straight-up illegal act.

but really it's a huge opportunity to get tactical about what film you're going to see – because what you're watching on the big screen can set up the mood for the whole night. We recommend opting for a semi-romantic movie with a banger of a sex scene. In fact, the more sexual tension the film has, the better. Genres to avoid: thrillers (especially psychological ones!), horrors, sob-stories and those oh-so depressing documentaries. Why? Because these will be the world's biggest mood killers, and the last thing you want after a date is to feel on edge and disturbed after sitting through two hours of Get Out.

So go for a sexy, fun flick and then, quietly, re-enact what's happening on the screen. We don't mean literally shagging in the cinema when the actors are getting it on, but mimicking them in a subtle way – so when they're kissing on-screen, get a little closer; when they're having sex, squeeze in a cheeky smooch. Essentially, you want to treat the movie as some seriously cinematic foreplay, and then when you take them back home, you can really get into your method acting.

Having these five date ideas ready to whip out at any moment will guarantee that you're the most prepared lady on the prowl this spring. And if you're planning to use these date-night-to-late-night steps, you're sure to have your best sex this season.

GO FORTH, AND CONQUER, LADIES! 