

LOVE LETTERS FROM HER EX-BOYFRIENDS

Taylor's known for spilling her heart out to the sweet strums of a guitar, but inspiration must come from somewhere. Having had her fair share of heartbreak – from Joe Jonas to Joe Alwyn – every love letter, gushing text and Valentine's Day wish acts as perfect fodder for her next pop hit. Whether you're breaking up over text or keeping her red scarf hostage, you're probably hearing all about it on her new album.

Oi, that's private!

FUR FROM HER CATS TO CLONE THEM

If there's one thing Taylor can't live without, it's cats. The proud mum of Olivia Benson, Meredith Grey and Benjamin Button, Tay's felines make the biggest impact on her life. Given you can already make a clone of your cat – or a 'Copy Cat,' shall we say – we imagine Taylor's storing up furballs to ensure she can produce Meredith 2.0 one day.

AN ABUNDANCE OF CHRISTMAS TREE-SCENTED PRODUCTS

Some Swifties may be partial to a bit of lavender, but we're betting Taylor's scent of choice is the sweet aroma of a Christmas tree. Having grown up on a literal Christmas tree farm, one whiff of an evergreen conifer will have the singer drifting off. Pine perfume, fir candles, and an abundance of tree-scented air fresheners that don't smell too far off your dad's bathroom cleaner. Divine!

INSIDE TAYLOR'S VAULT

FANCY A RUMMAGE THROUGH THE SINGER'S SECRET STASH OF HIDDEN TREASURES? OF COURSE YOU FLIPPING DO. COME ON THEN, LET'S HAVE A (PRETEND) LOOK

Oh, to glimpse into Taylor Swift's vault. When the singer released her first re-recorded Fearless (Taylor's Version) back in 2021, even more exciting than reliving You Belong With Me was the prospect of some brand-new songs. The vault tracks are essentially songs written from the time in her life that Taylor created each album – but rather than being released, they were safely locked away in her vault. Now, each new re-recorded album features a sprinkling of tracks that never quite made the original cut, including the likes of Mr. Perfectly Fine, I Can See You and I Bet You Think About Me. But of course, old songs aren't the only thing TayTay could be keeping in her vault...

TAYLOR SWIFT/PLANET PHOTOS, GETTY, SHUTTERSTOCK, INSTAGRAM

CONFETTI CANONS GALORE

"Confetti falls to the ground" and "There's glitter on the floor" – many of Taylor's hits reference the tiny mementos that make big memories. While we scramble to pick scraps from the floor of her Eras tour, we're sure the singer has tonnes of the stuff locked away for the mems. And if there's none available, simply nab loo roll from the toilet and shred it to make your own.

A WITCH BEING HELD HOSTAGE

Who needs special effects when you have the elements – or an actual witch – at your beck and call? Fans have long thought Taylor is magic, performing alongside perfectly-timed thunder and lightning during her Eras tour. But the real winner was during a performance of Labyrinth in Buenos Aires. As the star sang, "I thought the plane was going down," a perfect turn of events saw a plane fly overhead. T-Swizzle later tweeted, "Never beating the sorcery allegations."

Certificate

INSURANCE DOCUMENTS FOR HER LEGS

OK, so while we're not convinced she actually did insure those amazing pins of hers, us Smash Hits folks do like to cover all bases. So if they really are worth 26.5 million of your English pounds, then who can blame her for keeping it quiet? And where else would you keep the evidence if not in your secret vault, eh?

A WARDROBE FULL OF DISGUISES

There have been many theories of how Taylor sneaks out undetected – including popcorn machines and massive suitcases. And if there's no giant box around for the singer to contort herself into, never fear! As shown in The Man music video, adding glasses, a fake moustache and beard will do the trick. Naturally, we've got ideas of what else lies inside her box of disguises. A naff Donald Trump wig? A full American Football kit complete with a helmet? Or maybe a Ronald McDonald outfit? The possibilities are endless.