Management's Discussion of Fund Performance

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

Global Environmental Opportunities Fund (Class A/JABZX) returned 26.32% (excluding sales charges) for the year ended October 31, 2024. Global equities delivered strong performance as inflationary pressures subsided and a hard economic landing in the U.S. was avoided. With inflation edging closer to central bank target levels, interest-rate policy turned supportive. Sector-wise, information technology and industrial companies emerged as the strongest performers, with returns concentrated among a few large companies, particularly those associated with artificial intelligence (AI)-focused infrastructure investments.

TOP PERFORMANCE CONTRIBUTORS

Energy efficiency | The fund's holdings in this environmental segment, notably Eaton Corp. PLC, Schneider Electric SE, Trane Technologies PLC and Carrier Global Corp., benefited from a significant wave of investments (particularly in the U.S.) going into mega projects aimed at reshoring manufacturing capacity and the buildout of electrical infrastructure for various different applications ranging from the electric grid upgrades to AI data centers.

Environmental consulting | The fund's position in Tetra Tech, Inc. and AECOM, which are engaged in pollution control, gained as a result of record backlogs, with demand for their services driven by investments in water management and treatment, environmental compliance and remediation, reshoring manufacturing capacity and infrastructure resilience and climate adaptation.

Waste management & Recycling | Republic Services, Inc. and Waste Connections, Inc. contributed positively due to solid earnings growth driven by strong pricing, notably for industrial.

TOP PERFORMANCE DETRACTORS

Sustainable packaging | Companies manufacturing containerboard and paper packaging such as Smurfit Westrock PLC and Sig Group hurt performance as containerboard prices remained subdued and the industry grappled with oversupply.

Dematerialized economy | Several industrial software companies supporting sustainable product design and resource efficiency, including Dassault Systemes, Ansys and Hexagon meanwhile, saw their shares negatively impacted by weaker economic data and a slowdown in several key end markets including automotive and pharmaceuticals.

Weakness in specific holdings | Advanced Drainage Systems, Inc., a provider of pipes and other products for floodwater management and U.S. municipal water infrastructure, was hurt by weak economic data. Simulation software company Dassault Systemes SE, meanwhile, was negatively impacted by tepid pharmaceutical customer demand and project delays.
