

Is This Tokyo's Coolest Secret Amusement Park?

One of the most memorable things to do in Tokyo with kids is spending a day at Yomiuriland.

It's Tokyo's largest amusement park, yet it somehow remains a hidden gem among international visitors.

What makes it truly special is how much it changes with the seasons. In spring, the park is lined with cherry blossoms; in summer, the pools open up with slides and diving boards; in winter, it lights up with one of the biggest illumination shows in the country.

It feels like a different park depending on when you visit, which means no two families have the same experience here.

A one-day pass ranges from $16 dollars for preschoolers to $39 for adults, making it a fun and flexible day out for the whole family.

For more easy family finds and ready-made plans, get your FREE 5-day Tokyo Family Travel Guide; link in bio.