Tech Innovations Inc. is recalling the SmartGlove

BOULDER, Colo. (Oct. 16, 2025)— Tech Innovations Inc. announced today that they will be recalling their newest product, the SmartGlove. This comes following the investigation after three customers claimed damage to their hand.

Two of the customers had mild burns, the third experienced a heat rash. All three customers live in high humidity areas. In addition, the investigation found out that former CEO Louie Williams knew of the possible dangers before SmartGlove released.

Williams has resigned as CEO following the investigation but will remain owner of Tech Innovations Inc. as of right now. Vice President Ashley Park has been appointed CEO by the board of directors.

“Our internal investigators found the SmartGlove to be safe in dry to normal humidity climates. However, we are recalling the product until further notice. It is unacceptable for any customer to be at risk,” Park said.

Effective immediately, Tech Innovations Inc. will be taking SmartGlove off the shelves. Owners will receive a full refund. Those injured will receive compensation for damages as well.

Customers can find the recall information at www.techinnovations.com/recall with additional updates. The link will also be on our social media page on X and Instagram @techinnovations.
