

The Mexican cartel is coming after Diddy?! Is he working for them?! You won't believe what it's really over!

Yeah, you heard that right. I swear I can't make this up. Diddy is being sued by a member of the Mexican cartel! If you didn't know how deep this rabbit hole gets, you're about to find out. A member of the Sinaloa Mexican cartel has filed a lawsuit against Diddy for trying to bring minors to one of his parties. He says the attempt has begun to ruin his business! We've already heard and seen hella accusations of Diddy being freaked out. But to do it with one of the most dangerous criminal organizations in the world is pretty bold. For one, why in the world would he think that would be okay? And two, how far will this lawsuit go?

The last thing you would expect is a member of a criminal organization to try and go the legal route to get justice. Sources report a member of the Mexican cartel tried their luck with suing Diddy for trying to bring minors to their party just when Diddy is already facing multiple lawsuits from different people accusing him of salacious activities. There isn't much information outside of the reason for the lawsuit. But if someone in that world is trying to get the court to help them with something like this, you know it's serious. It's kind of weird though because you would think if there was a problem with the cartel, they would've handled it right then and there. But I guess that's where power meets power. According to everyone that's either spoken out against Diddy or even went as far as suing him, he was so comfortable with his power that doing something as bold as that doesn't seem so far-fetched. But the cartel though?! That's wild!

Everyone knows the cartel as being one of the biggest drug distributors in the world and also some of the most violent. There have been so many videos showing cartel members decapitating who they claim are their enemies --- or even running down on people for even trying to visit Mexico. Of course it would've been huge news if they would've done the same thing to Diddy. But it's pretty clear they recognize how powerful Diddy is. So how far did this lawsuit go? Not that far at all. The courts eventually dismissed the lawsuit because, well, why else? It's the Mexican cartel! It's described they are not a "legally protected interest". But does that mean they will take it up a notch since they couldn't do it the legal way? Who knows what may have happened at that party. It doesn't seem like Diddy's attempts to bring the minors were successful. But if the cartel believes you violated their space as much as their actual drug business, then it could get pretty messy. Diddy is going through it right now. He's already detached himself from the majority, if not all, of the companies he was associated with before this onslaught against him started happening. And now, he has more people coming out of the woodwork to put him deeper in the dirt.

A woman named Adria English, also known as Omunique, has even filed a lawsuit against him claiming he sex trafficked her at one of his popular white parties. According to English, she agreed to be a gogo dancer at his parties, but her occupation took a left turn when even her boyfriend at the time got involved. She says she was doing it to get her boyfriend a modeling opportunity. But because he denied Diddy's sexual advances to get further in the business, everything fell through. Things went downhill from there. English says Diddy and his crew gave her drug-laced alcohol and tried to force her to sleep with them. Unfortunately, there wasn't sufficient evidence against Diddy to have any criminal charges filed against him at the time. But she's not going to stop until justice has been served. Diddy's lawyer doesn't believe any of it. He says it doesn't matter how many lawsuits have been filed against him, the fact of the matter is: his client is innocent. But it's pretty hard to defend his innocence when more people are coming out with the same accusations.

We're living in a time where celebrities are getting caught up in the same way. And despite all the lawsuits that are filed against them, some of them actually stick and turn into criminal consequences. All of this is just making Diddy's court process a lot more difficult. He's already been exposed with a leaked video of him beating up Cassie after already denying that he abused her in any way. And he's also been accused by producers for trying to impose his sexual will in order for them to further their careers. Others have even described how violent he can be when he doesn't get his own way. It's just getting worse and worse, and the look on his face says he knows it. With the Mexican cartel suing him for the same thing, and obviously not needing the money, it could present an even deeper reason to believe that Diddy has been a menace this entire time. At least amongst the court of public opinion. There's no way things can be even crazier than that, right? If it does, then it truly may be a wrap for Diddy sooner than later.