

Joe Biden and his family may be doing some salacious things after getting caught with classified government documents. What is he up to? Watch until the end for all the details.

What's worse than a mistake? Multiple mistakes. Especially when they're a threat to national security. U.S. President Joe Biden has gotten caught up in an investigation that may turn into a scandal that can shape the way even Democrats look at him. Classified documents were found in Joe Biden's home that has the Department of Justice and the Biden Administration on high alert. You can imagine everyone in the Republican party being on high alert but ——— this is what they would want, right?

The findings weren't explained to the public for obvious reasons. However, the documents were found way before reports came out about their discoveries. Actually, they were found during pre-midterm elections, which happened MONTHS before the reports. What took the White House so long to report this? Maybe because they don't deem it too much of a problem or don't want it to be looked at as such. White House representatives told the media they don't believe Biden did it intentionally. Biden's attorneys cosign the idea of keeping everything under wraps, suggesting that they were attempting to find a medium between being transparent while being objective to the investigation. Even the idea of Biden not knowing what's in them is starting to become a point used to qualify for some grace. But I don't know. Seems kinda fishy.

This isn't the first time Biden has been caught with classified documents. As a matter of fact, it's happened FOUR TIMES! Sources say the first time it happened was back in November of 2022, where some docs were found in his personal office by his private attorneys. The attorneys gave them to the National Archives and Records Administration. The second finding was in the next month of December. These docs were found in his private library during an inspection. Then, once again in January, another document was found in another room in his house. All the documents found are believed to originally be from his time as Vice President in the Obama Administration.

Biden has spoken about the documents. Apparently, he was shocked about the discoveries — and even said that his counsel set up his office when his vice presidency ended. Journalists grilled him on his mess-ups, questioning what he was thinking, taking classified documents and hiding them. Especially in his personal quarters. Biden made sure he clarified the documents were in a locked garage, along with his Corvette. But does that matter? Or no one is going to keep the same energy applied to Donald Trump?

Back in August of 2022, Trump's Mar-a-lago resort in West Palm Beach, Florida was raided by the Feds after months of trying to get him to comply with them. The Feds ended up taking 184 classified documents, including nuclear secrets. The documents found at the resort makes the total amount of documents they have from Trump up to 320. And, of course, Trump was criticized for it harshly. The question of "what Trump was planning to do with the documents" still sit on the minds of government officials today. Due to his gigantic scandal regarding his relationship with Russian President Vladimir Putin and his alleged willingness to share government secrets with Putin that may have affected the election and other things, it's pretty difficult for anyone to give him the benefit of the doubt. So what does that say about Biden?

ANYONE can be a traitor. Even one of Jesus' disciples turned on him. And he wasn't even a President! The thought of President Biden snatching government secrets and storing it for his own personal use or security should definitely raise an eyebrow. There's already so much commotion going on around the world. Russia and Ukraine are fighting, North Korea is getting riled up, China is upset with the U.S. about their involvement with their Taiwanese issues, and the American people are still iffy when it comes to their own government. Now you want to say that the President may be trying to do some slick stuff behind the nation's back? It's insane!

What do you think could be in those documents? Nuclear secrets? Classified military assignments? Aliens? Maybe something about every U.S. President? And whatever is in them, what would be the purpose to have them for personal use? Let us know!