Terry Devlin is a 22-year-old Northern Irish right-back for Portsmouth who can also fill in in midfield, and he plays with box-to-box energy even from full-back. He's reliable defensively with solid tackling and good interception instincts, competes well in the air, and generally brings intensity and physicality to his side of the pitch. Going forward he'll get up and down the flank, overlap to support the winger and can contribute with goals or assists when he's allowed to play as a more attacking full-back. The main thing for him is sharpening the attacking details so his forward runs turn into more consistent final actions, and tightening his positioning when he steps into midfield areas so he doesn't leave space in behind him.
