Jacobo Ramón is a young Spanish centre-back (often used on the left side of a pairing) whose game is centered around proactive defending and building play from the back. As a profile, he's most comfortable when his team want to hold a reasonably high line: stepping in to intercept, being aggressive into duels, and using composure on the ball to find progressive passes into midfield. His main strengths are his size and reach in defensive situations, his willingness to defend forward (closing space early and contesting aerials), and a calmness in possession that helps Como play out under pressure. The main areas to refine are the inevitable details for a young centre-back—timing and control when he steps out (so he doesn't leave space behind), handling quick, sharp forwards in wider channels, and reducing errors that can show up when the pace of games increases.
