Milan van Ewijk stands out as a reliable defender for Coventry City, particularly when it comes to his ball recovery and ability to progress the play from the back. He's adept at winning tackles, and his capacity to read the game allows him to intercept passes effectively. While he's average in one-on-one situations and doesn't dominate in penalty area defending, he compensates with strong progressive passing, ranking high for his ability to move the ball forward with precision. His weakness in penalty box defending raises some concerns, especially when it comes to high-pressure situations. This aspect of his game could use improvement, as it impacts his overall effectiveness in crucial moments. Despite this, van Ewijk's capacity to recover the ball and engage in aerial duels makes him a valuable asset in defensive scenarios, allowing him to contribute meaningfully to Coventry's backline while helping to transition the play quickly. Overall, his style of play is well-suited for modern football, where defenders are expected to contribute in the final third, as well as defend.
