Noé Lebreton is a young central midfielder who gets involved high up the pitch, looks to break lines with his passing and movement, and contributes directly to chance creation. He can carry the ball into space, arrive around the box to support attacks, and consistently looks for forward actions that move the game toward goal, while still doing enough defensive work to compete in central areas. Where he can be less secure is in the trade-off that comes with that ambition, sometimes this will end in turnovers when he forces the progressive play, and he can be pulled out of shape if he chases the game too aggressively instead of holding midfield structure.
