Andreas Schjelderup thrives as an attacking force for Benfica, blending creativity with a growing goal threat. With 5 goals and 4 assists in 23 appearances this season, his ability to carve out chances is particularly striking. He operates effectively in tight spaces, displaying remarkable vision and awareness that allows him to find teammates in dangerous positions. While his goals have seen a significant boost, his assists have dipped, hinting at a tendency to shoot more rather than set up others. In terms of ball retention, Schjelderup's progressive carrying is above average, helping him advance play and maintain possession under pressure. However, his goal efficiency could use some improvement, as he sometimes takes on shots from less favourable angles, which may affect his overall impact. On the whole, his combination of chance creation and goal threat makes him a key asset for Benfica this season, and as he continues to develop, he could become even more influential in the final third.
