David Ozoh's style of play really sets him apart from other midfielders. His progressive passing is outstanding, allowing him to break lines and set the tempo for Derby County's attacks. With a remarkable ability to move the ball forward, he consistently finds teammates in space, making him a vital cog in the team's offensive setup. While he's got a knack for retaining possession, his chance creation is less effective, suggesting he might need to be more adventurous in the final third. Defensively, Ozoh shows decent awareness, often reading the game well, he has an eye for tackles and interceptions. His ball recovery stats are average, which might be a concern for a midfielder expected to contribute on both ends. Despite a slight decline in his scoring rate this season, his goal efficiency remains impressive, hinting at his capability to finish when he gets the opportunities. Overall, Ozoh's blend of passing precision and goal threat makes him a complete midfielder.
