Joaquín Panichelli is a penalty-box striker who's mainly known for being a true "#9": he lives in the penalty box, attacks crosses and second balls, and consistently gets on the end of chances. He's a physical presence who can occupy centre-backs, win aerial duels, and give his team a clear target to play into, but he's not just a static finisher, some of his best work is timing his movement to arrive where cutbacks and deliveries land. Where he still needs to improve is the "complete forward" side of being a #9, such as bringing others into play more reliably (cleaner layoffs/combination work) and sharpening his overall efficiency so he isn't as dependent on volume or perfect service to impact games. Overall, he's the kind of striker who offers you a consistent box threat and goals, with the next step being rounding out his link play to become more than just the final touch/focal point.
