France • Right foot • 178cm • Contract: June 2029

Warren Zaïre-Emery's style of play stands out in PSG's midfield, showcasing a brilliant ability to retain possession under pressure with a near-perfect ball retention rate. His exceptional distribution skills allow him to dictate the tempo, often finding teammates in advanced positions with precise progressive passes. He combines vision with creativity, contributing effectively to chance creation, which is evidenced by his four assists this season. At just 20, he's already making a name for himself as a complete midfielder. Defensively, he's still developing; while his tackling isn't his strongest suit, he compensates with excellent positioning and anticipation during build-up play. His ability to read the game is improving, but he'll need to increase his interception numbers to become a more rounded player. Overall, Zaïre-Emery's blend of technical skills and growing defensive acumen makes him a key asset for PSG as he continues to stack minutes in Ligue 1.
