Ethan Williams is an English professional footballer who plays as a winger for Falkirk in the Scottish Premiership, on loan from Manchester United. Born in Manchester, Williams came through the Manchester United Academy and after a loan spell Cheltenham Town last season, he has now gone to Falkirk to gain more senior experience in a completely different environment. Primarily deployed on the left wing but capable across the front line, he is excellent with both feet and has already established himself in and around the first team at Manchester United.

Potential:

Ethan Williams' standout trait is his ball striking off both feet, which gives him genuine threat from a variety of angles and distances. That, combined with a natural eye for goal and composed finishing. His work rate in and out of possession also supports scalability, as he doesn't rely solely on attacking freedom to influence games and can function within more demanding tactical structures.

In the short term, his current level aligns well with League One or Scottish Premiership football, where he can refine his decision-making, physical robustness, and consistency against more experienced and stronger defenders. If his development continues positively, a step up into the Championship looks like it is on the cards for Williams, particularly for teams that value wide players who have a knack for finishing. At that level, his two-footed shooting and willingness to work defensively could make him a reliable squad player for a mid table Championship team.

A Premier League outcome feels a bit more conditional. He has a pretty high technical base and his mentality both in and out of possession is there, but reaching even a low-end Premier League level would depend on sharpening his off-ball movement, increasing consistency across seasons, and proving his output translates against higher-level opposition.

Overall, Williams projects as a player with a strong chance of becoming a high-end League One or solid Championship winger, with upside beyond that if development, opportunity, and context align.
