

VIA SATELLITE

THE NATION'S NEWSPAPER

INTERNATIONAL EDITION

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1992

SPORTSLINE

A QUICK READ ON THE TOP SPORTS NEWS OF THE DAY

BASKETBALL/NBA Coverage, 1-48
Boston 130, Indiana 109	Houston 118, Golden State 116
Cleveland 95, Philadelphia 89	Miami 105, Denver 88
Minnesota 106, Dallas 105	Phoenix 103, Cleveland 100
Chicago 122, Washington 103	L.A. Lakers 81, New York 68
COLLEGE Coverage, 1-28
Selton Hall 73, G-town 71 (OT)	Oklahoma St. 72, Nebraska 51
Ohio St. 71, Purdue 64	Missouri 75, Iowa 51
Kentucky 74, South Carolina 56	Wisconsin 96, Michigan 78
Arkansas 82, Auburn 74	Duke 76, Virginia 67
Alabama 79, Mississippi St. 69
HOCKEY/NHL Coverage, 38
Montreal 4, Minnesota 1	San Jose 7, Quebec 4
Edmonton 6, Winnipeg 1

UK SPORTS HOT LINE: 0898-101-244
The latest sporting news from the USA, including baseball, football, basketball and ice hockey.
Call every day, in Britain only, 24 hours a day. Cost: 46p per minute, from 8 p.m.-6 a.m., 56p per minute.

COURIER DECLINES: No. 1-ranked Jim Courier declined an invitation to join Andre Agassi, Pete Sampras, John McEnroe and Rick Leach on the U.S. Davis Cup team in a quarterfinal match against Czechoslovakia March 27-29 at Fort Myers, Fla.

CALIFORNIA HOST: The Oak Tree Racing Association announced the Breeders' Cup will be held at Santa Anita Park in Arcadia, Calif.

BIRD RETURN: The Boston Celtics are looking to Larry Bird's expected return Sunday against visiting Dallas to help them out of their recent talismen. Bird went down with a sore back Jan. 5. They are 12-13 without their 12-time all-star forward.

ON TRIAL: Former Boston Celtic Charles Smith was to go on trial Thursday in Boston, facing three charges in the March 22, 1990, deaths of two female pedestrians: manslaughter, motor vehicle homicide and leaving the scene. Smith, a former standout at Georgetown, now plays for the Albany (Ga.) Sharp Shooters of the Global Basketball Association.

SOCCER LOSSES: The U.S. national soccer team lost 3-0 to Brazil before 40,000 fans at Fortaleza, Brazil. Rai had two goals for Brazil. It was only the second game ever between the nations and the first since they played an exhibition on Aug. 17, 1930, with Brazil winning 4-3 at Rio de Janeiro. The U.S. under-23 national team, preparing for the final round of Olympic qualification, lost 2-1 to an Italian third division Under-21 select team in Massa, Italy.

NO FIX: After finding nothing to support a claim that Mike Tyson's rape conviction was fixed, prosecutors in Indianapolis ended their investigation.

DEBARTOLO UPDATE: Results of a Menlo Park, Calif., police investigation of a Feb. 11 complaint of alleged sexual assault involving San Francisco 49ers owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr. were turned over to the San Mateo County District Attorney's office. D.A. James Fox has the option of prosecuting, dropping the case or sending it back to the police for more investigation.

CRAIG TRYOUT: The Minnesota Vikings will have Los Angeles Raiders free-agent halfback Roger Craig in for a tryout next week. The Vikings also are leaving open the possibility that running back Darren Nelson will return to the team next season. Nelson said he won't become an assistant coach at Stanford under new coach Bill Walsh because he wants to spend the next year near his 3-year-old son, Alec, who has a kidney tumor.

OLYMPIC BID: Manchester's bid to host the summer Olympics in the year 2000 received government backing with a $96 million grant. "We are going for gold," British Prime Minister John Major said. Major told reporters the government would fund money to build facilities, including a new indoor arena and cycling stadium. Manchester — which made an unsuccessful bid for the 1996 summer Games that were awarded to Atlanta — faces opposition from Sydney, Brisbane, Beijing, Berlin, Milan and Istanbul. The International Olympic Committee makes its decision next year.

By Jack Carey and Mark Hayes

USA SNAPSHOTS

A look at statistics that shape the sports world

True to their schools

None of the longest-tenured active NCAA Division I men's basketball coaches has been head coach at any other school.

Coach	School	Years
Tommy Amundson	UTEP	31
Dean Smith	North Carolina	30
Cy McLain	Bethune-Cookman	29

Source: NCAA By Bob Lutz, USA TODAY

TODAY'S TIP-OFF

NFL overseas . . . The Denver Broncos will play an exhibition game in Berlin this summer against the Miami Dolphins. The game is scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 15. Other NFL games overseas: Dallas against Houston in Tokyo on Aug. 2, and Washington against San Francisco in London on Aug. 16.

Crown Jewels . . . The search is on for the Crown Jewels — 22 cheerleaders, 18 and over, for the World League champion London Monarchs. Auditions are set for Sunday at the Empire Theatre, Screen 2, Leicester Square, from 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

TIGER HAS PGA BY THE TAIL

TIGER WOODS, 16, WILL BE THE YOUNGEST GOLFER TO EVER PLAY IN A PGA EVENT WHEN HE TEES OFF THURSDAY. PAGE 3B.

COMING

TIGER WOODS: Sophomore to play in L.A. Open.

BASEBALL'S SPRING TRAINING CONTINUES.

Riley's return ruined by Lakers, 8-68

By Melanie Neff

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Pat Riley's return to the Forum included two standing ovations and constant reminders of the good old days.

But the first-year New York coach couldn't have it all. The Los Angeles Lakers ended a seven-game losing streak by beating the Knicks 81-68.

"I'm glad it's over with," said Riley, whose team set a franchise record for fewest points in a game since the inception of the 24-second clock in 1954. "It brings a closure for me, personally. . . I've been thinking about coming back here all season."

The game was Riley's first against the franchise he guided to four NBA titles in nine seasons as coach. Riley also played six seasons with the Lakers, beginning in 1970.

"We wanted to beat him, no doubt about it," said Lakers guard Byron Scott. "It was really weird seeing him on the other side, giving signals to the other team."

Riley's return coincided with the commemoration of the anniversary of the Lakers' 1972 NBA title team, honored at halftime.

Will Chamberlain, 55, the 1972 Lakers' dominant player, missed the ceremony. Before the game, he became ill and left the Forum. He was admitted for tests to Centinela Hospital and remained hospitalized on Thursday. A hospital official said Chamberlain was in "stable condition and resting comfortably."

Wednesday's games, 48

Wisconsin staggers Michigan

By Jack Carey USA TODAY

Just two days after coach Steve Yoder announced his plans to resign, Wisconsin gained one of its biggest basketball victories in recent seasons. The Badgers upset No. 16 Michigan 96-78 in a Big Ten game at Madison, Wis., as freshman Michael Finley had 30 points and 13 rebounds.

Yoder said Monday he would quit at the end of the season after athletic director Pat Richter said he would not recommend extending Yoder's contract, which expires next season.

The visiting Wolverines fell to 17-7, 9-4 in the Big Ten. "I don't think it had anything to do with it," said Yoder, whose Big Ten record in almost 10 years is 50-125. "Our players handled everything really well. We prepared them to play this game, not for any special reason. We were playing to get to 13-13. We're trying to get to a tournament. That (his status) is history."

Bryan Caver and No. 25 Senior Ball put a crimp in Georgetown's Big East Conference title hopes with a 75-71 overtime win at East Rutherford, N.J.

Caver drove the length of the court and sank a layup as time expired to give the Friars (17-7, 9-4) the win. The loss knocked the No. 17 Hoyas (17-7, 10-5) into second place, a half-game behind St. John's.

No. 1 Duke (22-1, 12-2) celebrated the return of guard Bobby Hurley with a 76-67 Atlantic Coast Conference win against visiting Virginia. Hurley, who had not played since breaking a bone in his right foot Feb. 5, had four points and nine assists. Christian Laettner had 32 points and 13 rebounds.

No. 12 Kentucky (21-10-3) tightened its hold on first in the Southeastern Conference's East Division with a 74-56 win against visiting South Carolina. No. 9 Arkansas, leading the West, beat Auburn 82-74.

The No. 1 Virginia women improved to 2-1 with a 63-50 win against North Carolina. No. 3 Mississippi is 2-1 after beating Mississippi State 69-50.

Wednesday's roundup, 28

Morales back in mainstream

IN THE BOOK: Pablo Morales, working out recently at Stanford, still has the world record of 52.84 in the 100-meter butterfly.

PHOTO BY ROBERT HANAUER, USA TODAY

COVER STORY

Comeback on schedule for Trials

Swimmer says failure four years ago not motivation in trying for Olympic berth

By Karen Allen USA TODAY

Pablo Morales has spent the last couple of years poring over the book "The Swimmer" in Cornell's law library.

When he came out of retirement at the end of last August, he was so soft around the middle his coach pronounced Morales' once washboard-like abdominal muscles "missing in action."

His 100-meter butterfly world record of 52.84 seconds, set in June 1986, is almost as dusty as a shell of old tort. It's the oldest men's world record in the books.

After August 1988, when he retired in the wake of a disastrous Olympic Trials, Morales studied a lot, coached a little and, except for wandering into the weight room now and then, lived the life of an average couch potato.

So why then, on Monday when Morales climbs onto the starting block for the 100-meter butterfly race at swimming's Olympic Trials, is the bulk of the U.S. swimming world betting his improbable comeback has a good chance to succeed?

"Because," said Stanford coach Skip Kenney, "Pablo Morales is one of the most ideal athletes on this planet."

Please see COVER STORY next page >

Yamaguchi, Blair: Effort pays off

By Mike Dodd USA TODAY

After working years for Olympic gold, some of the USA's athletes are speeding toward Olympic green: cash from product endorsements.

The Winter Olympics normally don't produce selling superstars, and experts say this year is no exception. But gold-medal winners Kristi Yamaguchi and Bonnie Blair will collect.

Kellogg Co. already has paid Yamaguchi's picture on boxes of Special K and will distribute it nationally. Originally, it planned only a regional promotion with the gold-medalist figure skater from Fremont, Calif.

Speedskating gold medalist Blair has several opportunities in the works, said Parkes Brittain, her representative at Advantage International. "We anticipate she will have national television exposure," he said.

The top two should easily earn six figures in endorsements. Payments go to a trust fund until they relinquish amateur status.

Other athletes appear in ads, but often as the result of sponsorship of U.S. Olympic teams and not individual contracts.

Winter sports have never been so mass popular that it makes Madison Avenue say "Wow," said Marty Blackman, a consultant to corporations using athletes in advertising.

Biggest endorsement loser: NFL star/bobblehead Herschel Walker. "Two companies were ready to roll. If he had won, then you get into a mini-Bo Jackson thing," Blackman said.

Also:

- South Africa, banned from the international track federation (IAAF) since 1978, is expected to be granted temporary IAAF membership March 7, according to IAAF vice president Lamine Diack of Senegal.
- Membership paves the way for South African track athletes to compete at the Olympics July 25-Aug. 9 in Barcelona. The USA could get a preview of South African distance runners at the World Cross Country Championships March 21 in Boston.
- South Africa, banned from the Olympics since after the 1960 Games because of apartheid, was recognized by the International Olympic Committee last year.
- Jean-Claude Killy, who helped organize the recent Winter Olympics in Albertville, France, will receive the country's highest honor, the Legion of Honor. France's three gold medalists — Fabrice Gay (Nordic combined), Fabrice Becker (ballet skiing) and Michael Pruffer (speed skating) — will also receive the award.

Contributing: Dick Patrick, Karen Allen

Owner Yawkey's death ends era for Red Sox

John Donovan, Red Sox executive vice president, said Yawkey's shares in JFY Corp. go to team president John Harrington and "everything continues the same for practical reasons. The club will operate as it is currently operating."

Yawkey, born Jean Remington Yawkey in Brooklyn, N.Y., Jan. 24, 1906, was a fashion model in New York in the 1930s and reportedly met her husband when he visited an exclusive clothing store, where she was a saleswoman. They were married in 1944.

She twice prevented attempts to change control of the Red Sox.

—Hal Bodley

Baseball notes, 38

IVO A 6 A6 LA 1_08-19-02_mo_1_CMYK
2002:08:18:21:01:12

A6 Monday, August 19, 2002

Inland Valley Voice

SPORTS

HOW TO REACH US: Kevin Whaley, Sports Editor Phone: 484-7083 E-mail: kevin.whaley@latimes.com Fax: 484-7053

'NEFF SAID
Straw hat a reminder of heaven on earth

As I drove home from work one night last week, I was happy to be able to catch the end of the Angels' game even though it was after 11 p.m. It was already in extra innings and it was a great way to make the hour commute home go faster. It turned out to be a great game, one the Angels won in the bottom of the 12th after having to rally from two-run deficits and another one-run deficit in the 11th. Troy Glaus singled in Glendora native Shawn Wooten to win the game after the Angels left the bases loaded the previous inning.

MELANIE NEFF

But it was more than just a good game. It brought back a flood of special memories of my grandpa, Norman Eyer. It was my grandpa who instilled in me my love of the Angels and — equally as strong — my hate for the Dodgers. To this day, I have no real reason as to why I hate the Dodgers, but I do, as much as I hate UCLA. I have a reason for hating the Bruins, since I went to USC, but I can't tell you why I hate the Dodgers, except that is what my grandpa told me and that's the way it has to be.

He was an Angels fan from day one. I remember as a child sitting next to him on our dock at Lake Arrowhead. The same old straw hat on his bald head, fishing pole in one hand and the old black transistor radio with the Angels game playing next to him.

He loved the Angels and he loved Gene Autry. In fact, the resemblance between the cowboy and my grandpa was close enough to make them look like brothers.

He nurtured my crush on a young Jim Fregosi before I reached my teens. He taught me how to score the game and, most importantly, he gave me a love for the game. Unfortunately, before I was old enough to really appreciate everything my grandpa had to offer, he suffered a heart attack and several strokes. My grandpa took care of him at home as long as she could, but before long he had to go into a rest home. Those are the memories of my grandpa I want to forget.

But I do remember the one special day in 1979 when we took him out of the home and took him to an AALS game when the Angels played Baltimore. The twinkle I rarely saw in his eyes in

See NEFF, Page A7

JetHawks' error: pitching to Corbeil

Baseball: First baseman gets redemption for his costly mistake as Quakes avoid sweep.

Patrick Laverty
Inland Valley Voice

LANCASTER — It was a crucial mistake, but Azarias Corbeil made amends. After committing a fifth-inning error that led to three unearned runs for Lancaster, Corbeil delivered a game-winning three-run homer against JetHawks closer Brandon Medders with two outs in the eighth inning to give the Quakes a 6-5 victory and help them avoid a four-game sweep at the Hangar. With runners on first and second and two outs, Corbeil belted Medders' fastball deep to center field. Lancaster center fielder Dwight Edge knew it was gone well before it careened off the wall beyond the 416-foot fence, barely moving from his position. "I was just trying to put a good swing on it," Corbeil said. "It was a little above my knees, down the middle. I just dropped the barrel on it." He had thrown Junior Za-more five straight fastballs and he threw me two straight fastballs, so I had pretty good timing. I knew I hit it good. I saw the center fielder turn around and I was like, 'All right.' Then I saw him stop and I was like, 'All right.' But it looked like Corbeil's day wouldn't be all right prior to his eighth-inning heroics. With the Quakes leading 1-0, Andy Green attempted a sacrifice bunt. He popped the ball up, but Corbeil, playing first base, froze on the play, fielding it on one hop. Caught off guard, Jay Ro-

SCOREBOARD

QUAKES	6
LANCASTER	5

See QUAKES, Page A7

COLLEGE FOOTBALL 2002

STATE HIS CASE

Spurned by his first college football choice, Ryan Fuqua rushed to Portland and has never looked back.

Phil Witte
Inland Valley Voice

As Ryan Fuqua sees it, Cal's loss is Portland State's gain.

The former Ontario Christian running back was set for Berkeley when one of the Bears' coaches called to tell him they would not be bringing in any high school running backs, only junior college transfers, for the 2000 season. Without a backup plan, Fuqua ended up at Division I-AA Portland State, a program most consider light years removed from the glamour of the Pacific 10 Conference.

Of course, few players have gone from obscurity to stardom as quickly as Fuqua did last season. Leading a 1-AA school to a 7-4 finish might not land him on the cover of Sports Illustrated, but finishing the season ranked 18th in the nation in rushing with 1,586 yards on 253 carries is something to brag about anyway.

"Last year I was successful because I was surrounded by great players," Fuqua said. "With [quarterback] Jason Wood and [wide receiver]

STEVE BRENNER / COURTESY OF PORTLAND STATE

Ontario Christian grad Ryan Fuqua emerged in 2001 with 1,586 rushing yards for Portland State, the fifth-best total in the nation in Division I-AA.

Terry Charles making out games on the bench. His only action was returning an occasional kickoff.

What was most remarkable about Fuqua's season is that he accomplished all of that after spending the first six almost equaling the team's season rushing total (154 yards) to that point.

"We were down 17-0 at the half and our running game wasn't going well, so the coach

See FOOTBALL, Page A7

Miller graduate dealt to Rangers

Baseball: West-leading Mariners trade Van Dusen for veteran pitcher Valdes.

Patrick Laverty
Inland Valley Voice

A.B. Miller High graduate Derrick Van Dusen, one of the top prospects in the Seattle Mariners' organization, was traded Sunday to the Texas Rangers along with another minor leaguer in exchange for right-handed veteran Ismael Valdes.

Van Dusen has spent the majority of the 2002 season with San Bernardino of the high Class A California League, going 7-6 with a 3.10 earned-run average, which ranks fourth in the league. He struck out 118 batters and walked just 36 in 125 innings with the Stampeders.

Selected in the fifth round of the 2000 amateur draft after guiding Riverside Community College to the state championship, Van Dusen was ranked 14th among prospects in the Mariners' organization by Baseball America prior to this season.

Van Dusen should have an opportunity to rise through the pitching-starved Rangers system quickly.

Valdes, a former Dodgers pitcher, provides the Mariners with another experienced arm for the stretch run. Seattle leads Anaheim by a half game and Oakland by two in the American League West race.

Valdes, who has a 5-9 record and 3.85 ERA in 23 starts this season, will receive his first start with the Mariners on Wednesday at Detroit.

Former Lancaster JetHawk Jermaine Clark, a second baseman, also was obtained by the Rangers. Clark hit .315 with six home runs and 61 RBIs with Lancaster in 1999. Clark was hitting .266 with six home runs for Class AAA Tacoma (Wash.) this season.

Battle-tested unit falls short

Staff Reports
Inland Valley Voice

STAMFORD, Conn. — San Gabriel Valley, one of the top programs in Senior Babe Ruth World Series history, fell two games short of its eighth title over the weekend.

The team, which included a number of players from the Inland Valley, lost to Weimar, Texas, 3-2 in Friday's semifinals. Weimar went on to win the crown with a 3-2 victory over two-time defending champion Mobile, Ala., on Saturday.

San Gabriel Valley, which won its last World Series title in 1989, outscored its opponents 40-15 on the way to a 4-0 pool-play record and a quarterfinal bye. In the semifinals, however, Weimar ace Bandy Boone allowed just seven hits in a complete-game effort. San Gabriel had the bases loaded with one out in the sixth inning, but Boone responded by striking out Glendora High's Tyler Morrison and Bonita High's Scott Nestor to end the threat.

Darien High grad Sam Battle had a huge series for San Gabriel Valley, making the all-tournament team. The outfielder won the pre-tournament home-run derby and slammed two home runs

See BABE, Page A7

State Farm Open is there in Farnham's dreams

Golf: Rancho Cucamonga teen with strong family connections will seek amateur berth.

Kevin Whaley
Inland Valley Voice

RANCHO CUCAMONGA — Having Ken Venuti as a family friend has to pay off sometime. Maybe that time will be today at Empire Lakes Golf Course.

That's when and where Robert Farnham will be trying to reach his first professional golf event by competing in the State Farm Open's amateur qualifier on the same Rancho Cucamonga

STATE FARM OPEN AMATEUR QUALIFYING

- When: 7 a.m. today
- Site: Empire Lakes, Rancho Cucamonga
- Format: Player with top score qualifies for Buy.com Tour event Sept. 28-29 course that will play host to the Buy.com Tour event Sept. 28-29. Farnham, 18, is one of approximately 36 golfers expected to tee off this morning with hopes of joining professionals like Sunday's Wichita Open winner Tyler Williamson, tour money leader Cliff Kregge and

MARC CAMPOS / INLAND VALLEY VOICE
Robert Farnham has never played a complete round at Empire Lakes, but he has practiced shots on the par-71 layout.

See GOLF, Page A7

D10 R SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 2000

LOS ANGELES TIMES

ORANGE COUNTY

Leaders Criticize Format at Show Jumping Trials

■ Equestrian: With two rounds remaining, riders raise safety concerns for their mounts as quest continues for Olympics.

By MELANIE NEFF
TIMES STAFF WRITER

Nona Garson and Rhythmic led the U.S. Olympic show jumping trials Friday in San Juan Capistrano.

Peter Wyde and mount Macanudo De Niro clear a jump at the U.S. Olympic equestrian show jumping trials in San Juan Capistrano.

With the final two rounds of the Olympic equestrian show jumping trials scheduled Sunday in Del Mar, several riders criticized the format after Friday's competition at the Oaks Blenheim Riding Park in San Juan Capistrano.

When the four leaders, Nona Garson, Laura Kraut, Margie Goldstein-Eagle and Françoise Storzewski-Carvin, and former Olympian Norman Delo-Join gathered for interviews, talk turned to the format of the trials and the physical pressure being put on the horses.

After the first five rounds were completed in New Jersey in June, the trials continued with one round Wednesday and two Friday in San Juan Capistrano. The hot weather and a short 20-minute break between rounds had riders voicing their concern for the safety of their mounts and the possible effect on the final results.

"This is asking a tremendous amount from these animals," said Delo-Join, a 1992 bronze medalist who rides Glasgow. "It's an awful lot of stress for the horses."

Some horses cooled down by standing in buckets of ice and others were given fluids intravenously for dehydration. The horses were then shuttled on two 15-horse trailers to Del Mar.

"It could definitely affect the outcome," said Garson, who with her mount, Rhythmic, leads the field. "There was very little let-down time between rounds. The horses barely had time to cool down and get a normal drink. And now they have to get on a truck, ... another sweaty, stressful event."

"It's not like checking into the Hilton with the bed turned down and a mint on the pillow. There are a lot of things that have to be done to make the horses comfortable."

The competition will continue Sunday with the possibility of producing an all-woman Olympic show jumping team for the first time. The top six riders going into the final rounds are women.

Garson and Rhythmic, a 15-year-old Russian Warmblood gelding, led the field with a total of 20.5 faults.

Rhythmic—once the property of the Russian government before being sold along with several other horses, for 150 used washing machines—didn't begin competitive jumping until Garson bought him five years ago.

However, Rhythmic's bloodlines may have something to do with his talent. His father, Riva, was a famous Russian show jumper and competed in the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

"I feel I have a horse that even though he's 15, he hasn't used himself up," Garson said. "He's like the little general. It's very important for a horse like him to think he's king. He's been through a lot in his life."

After being used by the military in Russia, Rhythmic's new owner took him to Estonia, where he became a lesson horse.

"They said he was very bad," Garson laughed.

He was then sold to an owner in Finland, where Garson saw him in a junior jumping exhibition and matched him up.

"He has a lot of scars," she said. "I know if he could talk he'd have some great stories to tell."

Kraut and Liberty, a 9-year-old Dutch Warmblood mare, are in second with 20.75 faults. The pair has posted four clean runs throughout the trials, the most by any duo.

Goldstein-Eagle, in third with 21.25 faults, rides the biggest horse in the competition, Hidden Creek's Perin, a 10-year-old Westphalian gelding that stands 17 hands high.

Storzewski-Carvin and Moonstar, an 11-year-old German-bred Holsteiner gelding, are holding the fourth and final qualifying spot at 27.25.

Todd Minkus and Oh Star, who led the competition after Wednesday, tallied 28.25 faults in Friday's competition and dropped to seventh place.

"This is clutch time," Kraut said. "That's only the third time I've done two rounds on one bird and we aren't done yet. Anything can happen. I wish it was over today."

RIECH

Continued from Page 1

the qualifying standard or hope no one else does if he is to make the team.

Pakutys, who had the top 10 throws in the nation last year, needs a U.S. thrower other than himself to reach the 209-foot mark.

Riech, who has believed that distance only once in his career and threw 252 feet in the trials this year, controls his fate and will begin what could be a six-week qualifying odyssey at a track and field meet Monday in Malmo, Sweden.

"I'm going to go until I get it, then come home," Riech said, who was the only Native American competitor at the 1996 Games. "Hopefully, I'll get it the first throw."

The IAAF allows athletes until Sept. 11 to achieve the Olympic standard, giving Riech a handful of remaining opportunities.

Riech last surpassed 82 meters shortly before winning the 1996 trials, joining Pakutys as the only American in last month's field to throw that far. But the current qualifying standard has eliminated all but a few U.S. men's throwers, who have finished in the top eight in the javelin only once since the 1952 Games.

Riech doesn't feel like the sport has passed him by, even though some have already counted him out.

"This is all that's been in the paper. . . There's only one qualifier in the javelin and so no one is non-qualified," Riech said. "Well, I don't feel like a non-qualifier. I won't feel like a non-qualifier until Sept. 11."

"The IAAF permits up to four athletes from each nation to be entered in an Olympic event, though only three can actually participate. It's up to each nation's governing body to determine who competes in case too many meet the qualifying standards."

Trials are one way to decide. If more than four competitors have met the standard, the top four finishers at the trials would go. But when Grever threw six feet farther than Pakutys, the U.S. qualifying process became more complicated.

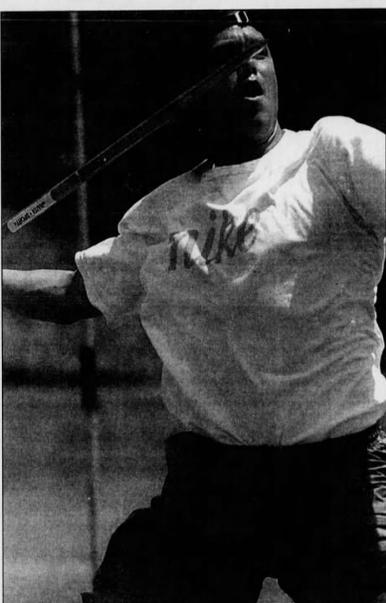

"It's a tough situation because I brought it on myself," said Pakutys, who was slowed by a shoulder injury at the trials. "I have faith in those guys, especially Todd. If he can break out in the next week or two, I think he has a good chance to go."

If Grever, Riech or another trial competitor fails to reach 82 meters before Sept. 11, only Grever will go to Sydney. That scenario would not only disappoint Riech and Pakutys, but the U.S.A.T.F. as well.

"We want to send as many athletes to Sydney as possible," explained Jill Greer, a spokesperson for the U.S.A.T.F. "It doesn't matter if it's the top three (from the trials) or first, second and 10th."

Blow surgery sidelined Riech for much of 1997 and '98, and he only competed in a few events last year. But Riech remains confident he can return to his form of four years ago. All he asks for is a slight tail wind, some mist creating air and a runway long enough to accommodate his 105-foot approach.

At least he has the emotional support he needs from his wife, Lisa Riech, who graduated from Marina High as Lisa Coleman in 1987, also competed at the Olympic trials. Her event is the high jump, but she didn't clear the opening height of 5-10 1/2, a height she has made it dozens of feet.

Todd Riech left for Europe in search of a mark of 269 feet or better to qualify for the U.S. Olympic team.

"Because my event was first, I gave myself a day to wallow in my sorrow," Lisa said. "But then the next day I said, 'I better be there for him because I don't want to bring him down with me.'"

Although the trials did not go as well as either of them hoped, the week provided some bonding time for a marriage barely five months old.

"Lisa and I are so new in our marriage and when you see that side of your better half, you're like, 'Wow, it's great to have somebody like that,'" Todd said. "I guess that's how your relationship grows. She sees you going through it, she knows how much I want it and she knows how much it means to me."

Riech grew up on the sprawling Flathead-Kootenai Indian reservation in Montana, dominating his peers on playing surfaces from Billings to Butte.

Part Native American and part German, Riech was a finalist in the 100 meters at the AAU national championships when he was 10. He also averaged 35 points a game in basketball at a high school senior; the same year he won five individual events at the state track and field championships.

He accepted a track and field scholarship to Fresno State, where he was a four-time All-American and NCAA champion in the javelin as a senior.

Riech's career reached a pinnacle when he threw 81.86 meters (268.86 feet) to upset Pakutys at the 1996 Olympic trials and earn a spot on the U.S. team.

"It was great," said Riech, who went on to finish 17th in Atlanta. "You dream about it all your life. I just knew I was going to win that thing."

With his participation in the 1996 Games, Riech joined the legendary Jim Thorpe as one of the few American Indians to compete in the Olympics.

"There aren't very many Native Americans who get off the reservation to go do anything [in sports]," Riech said. "It was strange for me to see that because there were a lot of great athletes. I always wanted to be the one that went and actually did something and brought it back."

Riech was hoping to get something back from his community as well.

The Native American Sports Council contributed $10,000 to Riech in 1996 for living and training expenses, but the tribe raised $2,000 for expenses related to his Olympic training this year.

But Riech was disappointed when a nationally circulated Indian newspaper received only $207 after soliciting donations.

"That was upsetting for me because a lot of Native Americans around the country wondered, 'Why aren't more Native Americans in the Olympic Games?'" said Riech, who estimates that it costs $40,000 for the year to 18 months of training it takes to prepare for the Games.

"And that's why, because nobody wants to stand by [Native American Olympians] I think the people who did donate, but I was astounded that only $207 came in."

Riech said he pays for most of his training expenses. One of his sponsors markets training supplements and provides them free to Riech, who estimates that saves him about $200 a month.

He isn't sure what direction his life will take after his Olympic chase ends. Riech is already considering trying again four years from now, but may instead decide to open a personal training business in Orange County.

He said he may even take Lisa and return to his roots.

"It's quite expensive down here," Riech said. "Nothing like the Montana prices."

FIRST CHASE

VIA SATELLITE

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1992

LIFELINE

A QUICK READ ON WHAT PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT

LIFE HOT LINE: 1-800-555-5555

Call 24 hours a day for movie reviews, horoscopes, soap opera summaries and Dr. Joyce Brothers' advice. Press 4 for Life Information, instructions, 40. Cost: 95¢ per minute

VIVA 'VEGAS': The honeymoon has just begun for Honeymoon in Vegas, which was the nation's top movie in its debut weekend with an estimated gross of $1.5 million.

BOND BALLADS:EMI Records is celebrating the 30th anniversary of James Bond movies with a 22-song release of the best of 007's soundtrack recordings.

SIMON: A musical bond with Agent 007. BOSS BLONDE: Last Labor Day, blonde movie headlines by entering the working world and opening a catering business.

'BILLBOARD' NO. 1: End of the Road, Boyz II Men, pop single. R&B single: Still Believe in You, Vince Gill, country single, Restless Heart, Peter Cetera, adult contemporary single: Some Gave All, Billy Ray Cyrus, LP.

OF BOOKS & CENSORS: John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, published in 1937, was the book most frequently challenged by school censors during the 1981-82 school year.

RIVERA WON'T BE CHARGED: A Junesville, Wis., prosecutor says he won't press charges against Gerardo Rivera for punching a heckler at a Ku Klux Klan rally.

ROCK & POLITICS: Sax player and presidential candidate Bill Clinton continued courting the MTV vote over the weekend by calling in to Rockline, a syndicated radio show.

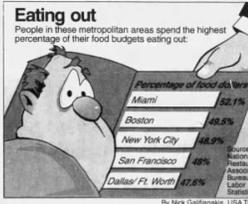

MOVE OVER DAN & DAVE: While your pooch may be sleeping off the dog days of August under the porch, dedicated dogathletes across the U.S. are pursuing their dreams of athletic glory and also endorsement contracts.

INSIDE LIFE

Crowneft 5D Show 4D Larry King's People 2D Television 3D

USA SNAPSHOTS

A look at statistics that shape our lives

THE NATION'S NEWSPAPER

Jethro Tull's latest... is the live acoustic album 'A Little Light Music,' due Sept. 22.

'Kids' Recipes for Success' is a Success Rice cookbook of easy recipes by kids. To order, send $3.95 to: 'Kids' Recipes for Success, P.O. Box 2030 A, Rock Island, Ill. 61204-2030.

By Rob Brown, USA TODAY SHERYL LEE: She's back as Laura Palmer in Twin Peaks movie. Review, 4D.

SECTION D

MORE ROYAL SPECULATION UNDER WAY

RUMOR HAS IT THAT PRINCESS ANNE AND CMDR. TIM LAURENCE WILL BECAREFULLY ENGAGED THIS WEEK. PAGE 2D. CLASSIFIED ADS CAREERS 4D, 5D MARKETPLACE 4D, 5D 1-800 DIRECTORY 4D, 5D

CBS' Emmy exposure

'Northern,' 'Murphy' get top awards

By Jefferson Graham and Melanie Neff USA TODAY

PASADENA, Calif. — CBS Monday night hits won big at Sunday's Emmy Awards, with Northern Exposure best drama and Murphy Brown best comedy.

COMIC COUPLE: Tom and Roseanne Arnold arrive at the Emmy Awards show Sunday. The couple presented awards for best directing and supporting actor in a comedy series.

GLAMOUR COUPLE: 'L.A. Law' costar Corbin Bernsen and wife Amanda Pays.

L.A. is losing its sunny attitude

By Marilyn Elias USA TODAY

LOS ANGELES — Mellow L.A. is but a nostalgic memory. Riddled by the aftereffects of riots, quakes and widespread layoffs, adults here are deluging therapists with anxiety problems.

Inquires at the UCLA Anxiety Disorders Program are up by as much as 50% in the last several months, says program director Alexander Bystrinsky. The earthquake (June 28) was the straw that broke the camel's back, he says.

Higher unemployment than in the U.S. overall. The April riots, ravaging some areas and spilling into others thought to be "safe."

Insomnia, panic attacks and depression are rising, experts report. Marriages are crumbling under the weight. More people are seeking divorce mediation because one partner (usually the man) "isn't seen as pulling his weight economically."

Letterman at large

The early buzz backstage at the Emmys had nothing to do with the awards but where David Letterman will land next.

Letterman at large

The early buzz backstage at the Emmys had nothing to do with the awards but where David Letterman will land next.

Some doubt repressed memories

By Karen S. Peterson USA TODAY

Unfounded, "repressed" memories of childhood sexual abuse are splitting families and sending innocent people to jail, charges Seattle psychologist Elizabeth Loftus.

Her views fuel one of the hottest controversies in mental health today. In the new Current Directions, she analyzes research on how perception of an event can be distorted.

"There is good reason for healthy skepticism," says Loftus, whose studies are partly funded by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Families who say they've been falsely charged started the False Memory Syndrome Foundation in Philadelphia; 500 families called in the past four weeks.

Some "memories" are often recovered through self-help books, or with therapists who mean well, Loftus says, but whose "errors of suggestion" are causing devastation.

COVER STORY No more wild and crazy Cage

In 'Vegas,' the everyday Everyman plays — a surprise — a regular guy

By Karen Thomas USA TODAY

LAS VEGAS — Say Nicolas Cage, and most people think wild.

Some swear he's crazy. "I don't wear a snakeskin jacket, and I don't eat with a wooden hand," says the star of Honeymoon in Vegas.

Talking about his new movie, No. 1 in its opening weekend, he appears normal enough in a blue suit. A peek under the table reveals no trace of his famous black boots.

You have to wonder, though, that bizarre public persona fit so snugly into most of his over-the-edge roles.

His stuffed-bug collection mirrored 1989's Vulpine's Kiss (he added his own roach-chomping scene). He was looking for a woman who could "kick my a--" just about the time Cher whipped his Misanthrope character into shape.

COVER STORY

No more wild and crazy Cage

In 'Vegas,' the everyday Everyman plays — a surprise — a regular guy

By Karen Thomas USA TODAY

LAS VEGAS — Say Nicolas Cage, and most people think wild.

Some swear he's crazy. "I don't wear a snakeskin jacket, and I don't eat with a wooden hand," says the star of Honeymoon in Vegas.

Talking about his new movie, No. 1 in its opening weekend, he appears normal enough in a blue suit. A peek under the table reveals no trace of his famous black boots.

You have to wonder, though, that bizarre public persona fit so snugly into most of his over-the-edge roles.

His stuffed-bug collection mirrored 1989's Vulpine's Kiss (he added his own roach-chomping scene). He was looking for a woman who could "kick my a--" just about the time Cher whipped his Misanthrope character into shape.

A NEW PHASE: Nicolas Cage is ready to be moonstruck, but he's looking for stability, too. 'I like the idea of schoolteachers,' he says.

Call 1-800-USA-CLAS... to give flight to aircraft sales through USA TODAY Classified

https://usatoday.newspapers.com/image/1142951468/

FIRST EDITION

USA TODAY · THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1992 · 3A

NATIONAL NEWS NETWORK

Indictment claims plot to slay Gravano family

Members of two Mafia families huddled in a Boston pub days before the start of John Gotti's racketeering trial to plot the murder of witness Salvatore "Sonny Bull" Gravano's wife and children...

NO GRASS: The Drug Enforcement Administration rejected an offer to allow marijuana use for medical purposes...

BOMBING INDICTMENT: A federal grand jury indicted four people, including a rookie police officer...

WATER SCARCITY: The Los Angeles City Council is studying a plan to end mandatory water rationing...

MINISTRY INVESTIGATED: Texas authorities are entitled to see some financial records of televangelist Robert Tilton's Word of Faith World Outreach Center Church...

ALL EARS: Robbery suspect Gregory Pierre, whose oversized ears help victims pick him out at police lineups...

ALSO WEDNESDAY... HONORS: President Bush posthumously awarded the Presidential Citizen's Medal to two U.S. Middle East hostages who died in captivity...

STANFORD PRESIDENT: University of Chicago Provost Gerhard Casper, 54, was named president of Stanford University effective Sept. 1...

CLOSE-UP: AIR ACCIDENTS

New findings in Flight 811 deaths: The cargo door of United Airlines Flight 811 flew off the Boeing 747 jumbo jet — killing nine people — because of an electrical malfunction...

The known I was right from the beginning... The NTSB revised admitted electrical malfunction... findings after examining the door, retrieved from the Pacific Ocean bottom 1 1/2 years after the 1988 accident...

CAMPBELL: "Pleased they've... The NTSB revised admitted electrical malfunction... findings after examining the door, retrieved from the Pacific Ocean bottom 1 1/2 years after the 1988 accident...

Written by Paul Levitt. Contributing: David McConnell and Bruce Franklin.

THE NATION Bandit's weapon: AIDS

At least 8 robberies committed in California

By Melanie Neff and Mary-Ann Bender Special for USA TODAY
NORTHIDGE, Calif. — A so-called "AIDS Bandit" has pulled at least eight robberies this week by brandishing a syringe he says is loaded with AIDS-infected blood...

to consider the syringe a deadly weapon. On the streets, it took no deliberation. "My heart jumped in my throat," said Bill Ledgerwood, owner of Northridge Cyclery...

BANDIT ON VIDEO: A security camera at a 7-Eleven in Northridge, Calif., caught the 'AIDS Bandit' in action.

By Roger H. Vinig. Los Angeles Daily News via AP.
would have gotten that close." The bandit had made no attempt to disguise himself and was almost captured outside the CNC market by a man who stuck his hand through the window and grabbed the suspect's blond hair...

Poverty crowds more families

Families double up in houses

By Margaret L. Udansky USA TODAY
For decades, American families grew smaller as their homes grew larger — property measured in acres...

CRAMPED QUARTERS: Daisy Candido passes out water to her family in the kitchen of their studio apartment.

Making do with a studio

By Sally Ann Stewart USA TODAY

LOS ANGELES — Santos Candido works days as an electrician and nights as a $5-an-hour security guard to make his rent...

More crowded houses: For the first time since 1940, the percentage of households has increased.

Table with 2 columns: State and Percentage of households with more than one person per room. Hawaii has highest (15.22%), Iowa has lowest (1.50%).

Whites average fewest people per household: 2.60 for Whites, 3.01 for Black, 3.31 for Native American, 3.61 for Asian, 3.72 for Hispanic.

Los Angeles has biggest increase: 20% increase in immigrant households help push Los Angeles above U.S. average.

Los Angeles 20%, U.S. average 5%.

Source: 1990 census. By Elyse A. McLean, USA TODAY

Boston museum offers $1 million reward for art

By John Larrabee USA TODAY
BOSTON — Two years to the day after the world's greatest art heist, the museum from where the priceless paintings were cut from their frames launched an extraordinary effort to get them back...

seascape. Museum officials say the works are priceless; other experts estimate their value at $200 million. Gallery spaces where the paintings once hung still are bare...

tion of art thefts that high on its list of top priorities," says Milton Esterson, of ARTNEWS magazine. Where are the paintings? Experts believe the theft and kept the paintings for his private enjoyment...

RARE REMBRANDT: Dutch master's only seascape 'Storm on the Sea of Galilee' was stolen from a Boston museum in 1990.

Contributing: Mimi Hall

ORANGE COUNTY

Los Angeles Times

ON THE INTERNET: WWW.LATIMES.COM
CIRCULATION: 1,111,385 DAILY / 1,866,685 SUNDAY

MONDAY, OCTOBER 16, 2000
COPYRIGHT 2000 / CC / 12 PAGES

DAILY 23¢
AN EDITION OF THE LOS ANGELES TIMES

COLUMN ONE

Cold War in Fertility Technology

■ With more people freezing embryos for future use, science has outpaced the legal system. New uses are emerging, and debate is growing about how human the cell clusters are.

By AARON ZITNER
TIMES STAFF WRITER

NORFOLK, Va.—Every day, Jacob Mayer and his staff open a set of squat gray tanks that sit like oversized milk bottles on the floor of their baby laboratory. Using a plastic dipstick, they make sure that each one contains the proper amount of liquid nitrogen, which keeps the temperature inside at a frosty 321 degree below zero.

A slip in the nitrogen level could be calamitous for the contents of the tanks: thousands of tiny human embryos.

No one keeps accurate figures, but specialists believe that more than 100,000 human embryos have accumulated at U.S. fertility clinics like this one, Norfolk's Jones Institute for Reproductive Medicine.

They are the little-wanted byproduct of the boom in fertility services, in which couples often create more embryos than they use in any one attempt at pregnancy.

The extras are usually frozen at a kind of suspended animation in case their owners want to try again.

"These are extremely precious to our patients," said Mayer, the embryology lab director, who is automatically paged when electronic sensors in the tanks detect any sign of trouble.

"Our underlying feeling is one of nurturing and protection," he says.

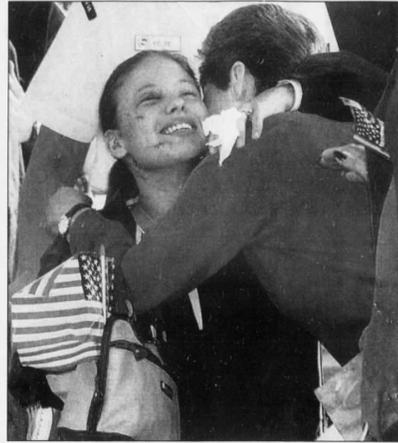

Now, however, embryos like these are drawing interest far beyond the doctors and patients who created them. An embryo people or property? Soul or just cells? The question is sure to test philosophers for years. They also are at the center of a growing number of legal questions today.

Adoption agencies are transferring embryos to hopeful patients who cannot create their own. But the work is hampered by a lack of clear laws about who the legal parents of the resulting children will be.

Fertility doctors have no guidance from lawmakers as to whether they may destroy any of the 20,000 abandoned embryos, leaving physicians to make judgments on their own.

Creating a cloud over efforts to cure disease, religious groups are pressing Congress to block promising medical research in which embryos are dissected. And, inevitably, embryos are tearing us in divorce and custody disputes, forcing judges to decide whether laws written for property and contracts should apply to this early form of human life.

In two states—New York and California—courts ruling in high-tech reproduction cases have attempted to clarify parenthood and custody laws.

A sailor who was hurt in the Cole explosion is welcomed back to the ship's home port in Norfolk, Va. A17

NEWS ANALYSIS

Clinton's Legacy May Hinge on Next 3 Months

■ Diplomacy: Administration suddenly is scrambling to handle multiple foreign crises—with solutions elusive.

By ROBIN WRIGHT
TIMES STAFF WRITER

WASHINGTON—For Bill Clinton and his weary advisers, it's a sobering thought: The president's foreign policy legacy may well be determined more by how he handles multiple crises during his last three months in office than by anything he's accomplished over the previous seven years.

The Clinton administration is scrambling to deal simultaneously with the unraveling of its seven-year push for Middle peace, an apparent terrorist attack on a Navy destroyer, the troubled transition of power in Yugoslavia, the rapid crumbling of sanctions against Iraq and graying foreign oil prices. About the only good news comes from a most unlikely place—North Korea—but even that is no sure thing, as the president must convert last week's talks with a high-ranking North Korean official into concrete gains that will help end half a century of hostility.

"Solutions aren't easy," said Richard N. Haass, director of foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution, a centrist think tank.

Please see CLINTON, A17

Israeli Abducted in Europe as Deepens

By MARY CURTIS
TIMES STAFF WRITER

JERUSALEM—An Israeli businessman and colonel in the army reserves who was traveling abroad has been kidnapped by Hezbollah, the Lebanese Shiite Muslim militia, the Israeli Defense Ministry confirmed Sunday.

The abduction deepened the sense of gloom here as Prime Minister Ehud Barak prepared to attend a U.S.-brokered summit in Egypt today with Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat.

Speaking to his Cabinet, Barak said he felt strongly that "the peace process in its present form has come to an end."

His priority now, he said, is to establish a broad-based emergency government that would include Ariel Sharon.

Please see MIDEAST, A16

Chevron, Texaco Agree to Merge in $36-Billion Deal

■ Energy: Result would be fourth-largest oil company in the world. Pact is sure to draw fire of consumer advocates, who say too few companies already dominate the industry.

By NANCY RIVERA BROOKS
TIMES STAFF WRITER

Deciding merger is better the second time around, Chevron Corp. and Texaco Inc. agreed Sunday to a long-timored $36-billion combination of the two oil giants, top company executives confirmed.

The deal, which follows a failed attempt by the two firms to merge last year, comes at a time of soaring oil and natural gas prices, and is sure to attract the scrutiny of regulators and consumer groups.

The transaction, to be formally announced today before the stock market opens, was approved Sunday at separate meetings of the companies' boards of directors, according to senior executives who revealed the merger.

The merger would create the world's fourth-largest publicly traded oil company—to be called Chevron-Texaco Corp.—with the financial muscle and low-cost structure to find and produce oil and natural gas in far-flung corners of the world, analysts said.

In acquiring Texaco, San Francisco-based Chevron could achieve $1.2 billion in savings, including 4,000 expected layoffs, the executives said.

Whatever benefits may await the merger partners, the deal is sure to be opposed by consumer advocates, who contend that the business of producing oil, refining it into gasoline and selling fuel to the public already is concentrated in the hands of too few companies.

A New Giant

The following list ranks a combined Chevron Corp. and Texaco Inc., among the world's biggest publicly traded oil companies, by 1999 sales.

Oil companies	1999 Sales (in billions)
1. Exxon Mobil Corp.	206.91
2. Royal Dutch/Shell Group	105.3
3. BP*	101.18
4. Chevron/Texaco	72.3
5. Total Fin Elf SA	64.23
6. Conoco Inc.	27.21
7. Eni SpA	26.78
8. U.S. Marathon Group	24.33

* Formerly British Petroleum. Includes the former Amoco and Mobil.  Chevron had $36.6 billion in 1999 sales. Includes $1.2 billion in 2000 sales. Source: Standard & Poor's.

Such a merger certainly would be closely scrutinized by the Federal Trade Commission, which is investigating gasoline pricing in California and the Midwest, and California Atty. Gen. Bill Lockyer, who is conducting his own probe of the state's chronically high gasoline prices.

In the last few years, the FTC has delayed but ultimately allowed the creation of "super-major" oil companies through November's merger of Exxon and Mobil, as well as British Petroleum's 1998 purchase of Amoco Corp. and its April

Please see MERGER, A19

Can't Dodge Politicking in Swing-Vote Packerland

■ Wisconsin: Residents in crucial state are inundated by candidates, TV ads and posters.

By ERIC BAILEY
TIMES STAFF WRITER

APPLETON, Wis.—So this is what we're missing out in California. This is what it's like game day, front row center in the belly of Green Bay Packers country.

We're not talking football. These days, the big battle is on the presidential gridiron, as the candidates throw hat after hat for the White House. A highlight reel:

■ As the leaves turn orange in this scrubbed little city, the most frequent forward pass in political campaign mail being stuffed beside the sewer bills, endlessly exhorting Al Gore or George W. Bush.

■ That phone call, the one interrupting dinner, all too often is a political partner tapping the hopes and fears of residents here near the north shore of Lake Winnebago.

■ Outside Kohl's Department Store, an unsuspecting shopper huddled in a down vest is stopped by yet another out-of-state newspaper reporter asking pesky questions.

■ Wisconsin's airwaves are jammed with dueling campaign ads from America's aspirants for the Oval Office, wedged into station breaks from Oprah to the late-night news and beyond.

■ Television may rule the modern campaign, but folks in Appleton or Green Bay, 25 miles to the northeast, also get candidates in the flesh. Bush and Gore have each visited Wisconsin half a dozen times. So have their wives. Their running mates and supporters.

In California, we rarely get such abundant attention. We've mostly been written off—at least by Democrats—as a done deal interrupting dinner, all too often is

Please see SWING, A8

Bush Gets Mixed Results in Helping Texas Needy

■ Politics: Critics say too many children lack health care. Supporters cite the state's lower poverty rate.

By MARIAN LA GANGA
and T. CHRISTIAN MILLER
TIMES STAFF WRITERS

HOUSTON—George W. Bush was angry. Presidential debate No. 2 had gotten testy, with Democratic rival Al Gore accusing the Texas governor of propping over a state where the numbers of uninsured children had increased.

"If he's trying to allege that I'm a heartless person and I don't care about children, he's absolutely wrong," Bush snapped, sidestepping the issue and continuing incorrectly, "I want to remind you, the number of uninsured in America during their watch has increased."

With Campaign 2000 in the home stretch and far too close to call, Bush's record as governor of Texas—particularly surrounding the poorest of his constituents—is under increasing attack.

Campaigning in Michigan on Saturday, Gore hammered away at Bush's health care record for the freely Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut, Gore's running mate, tossed the colonel along the Texas-Mexico border Friday, accusing Bush of neglect for the destitute Latino neighborhoods. E-mail files daily from both camps: Bush is bad for the poor. No, Bush is good. Bad. Good.

Which is it? When it comes to poverty, probably both, depending on whom you ask.

Please see TEXAS, A6

Coed Field Hockey? O.C. Boy Is Test Case

■ Sports: He loves the game, the girls' team loves him, and his ban is under appeal. A gray zone colors the debate.

By MELANIE HOFF
TIMES STAFF WRITER

Quan Yu is co-captain of the Santiago High girls' field hockey team, a title that goes to players who are loyal and inspirational and exhibit a team-first attitude.

Captains are also, quite often, stars of the game. Not Yu. You have to play to be considered a star, and Yu has been banned from competition because the California Interscholastic Federation Southern Section has ruled that you have to be a girl to play field hockey.

Yu, a boy, doesn't qualify. "Girls can play guys' sports, like wrestling and football, but I can't play field hockey," the soft-spoken 17-year-old said after watching his team defeat Westminster on a recent afternoon. "It doesn't make sense. An athlete can't be a boy."

The all-female cast championing Yu's cause obviously agrees: His teammates, their coach and even girls from some opposing teams are rallying behind an appeal on Yu's behalf.

Please see SPORTS, A18

INSIDE TODAY'S TIMES

MARINERS STAY ALIVE
Seattle of the Yankees lead to 3-2 in the AL championship series, and the Mets went up 3-1 over St. Louis in the NL. O1

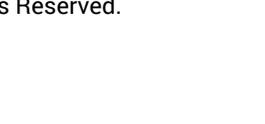

CRIME DOWN AGAIN
U.S. crime fell in 1999, but a spike in murders in Orange County and elsewhere tempered the positive trend. A10

Today's Weather
COASTAL 75 56
INLAND 78 55

FORECAST: Sunny skies after partly storming this AM. O2

ON THE INTERNET:
http://www.latimes.com

TOP OF THE NEWS
ON A-Z 7 65944 00023

Quan Yu practices with teammates before a game. He's allowed for each game to tap into another school.