

America's Reality

The state of oppression starts with power obsession.

But those who oppress fear the glares of those they have oppressed.

They've ignored the pain they've caused to those who carried them all this way.

But those who carried them have stopped.

standing high before the ones they refuse to obey.

Silent cries are no longer an option — it is an action they must take.

With raging anger they cause a commotion,

and under no command shall they suppress it

for those who do not understand their heartache.

The abused now speak with a knifelike voice and the strength of their ancestors.

They fight for what is right —

heads high, fists raised,

determination in their eyes

applying pressure to the oppressor.

They will finish the fight of their ancestors.

They will take back their humanity.

This battle, brothers and sisters, we shall not lose —

for it is a battle for our sanity.
