Summary

On a gloomy afternoon in a hospital room, Aiden expresses his fear concerning losing his life to cancer at a young age, to his mother, Diane. Proceeding the struggle and clash between Diane and Aiden's different faith, William and Chloe interfere innocently and changes Diane's perception of faith permanently.

Synopsis

Diane, Aiden's mom, and Aiden keep John, Aiden's dad company in the hospital ward after he is diagnosed of cancer and gets admitted. Diane expresses her worry and fear about John's life, while Aiden communicates how he looks forward to playing hide and seek with his father after his recovery. Proceeding this, Diane gets up and walks away from the room when John tells Aiden to be faithful in God and believe in divine intervention, no matter what happens. John then goes ahead to pray with Aiden and dies while at it.

A few months after John's death, Diane and Aiden have a heart-to-heart discussion in the hospital room while Aiden lays on the sick bed. Aiden tells Diane that he is believing in miracles, while he expresses his fear concerning losing his life to cancer like his dad when a new kid, William walks into the ward with his mother Chloe. William runs towards Aiden's bed to have a conversation and reassure him.

What is unknown to Diane is that William and Chloe are faithful Christians who comes into her life to help develop her faith and change her perception concerning divine intervention through Aiden's illness. Proceeding the cancer trial, Diane becomes more receptive towards faith, while Aiden and William become best friends.
