RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Honors Senior Thesis in Literature

2023–2024

Hamilton College – Clinton, NY

“The Voices Awakened on the Rocks”: An Explication of Polyphony & Peculiar Consciousness in Georg Büchner’s Lenz

- Supervised by Professor Onno Oerlemans. Conducted year-long independent inquiry into an originally German literary text examining how its multivocal narrative structure mirrors its protagonist's ontological crisis.
- Demonstrated how the 19th-century novella, by way of narrative structure, contributed to preternaturally modernistic view of being by causally connecting the desire for, and seeking of, the Romantic dream to a hostile fragmentation of consciousness, providing a historically grounded framework to reinterpret Lenz.

Honors Senior Thesis in Philosophy

2023–2024

Hamilton College – Clinton, NY

This May or May Not be Something: How Narratives Inform Our (Un)Certainties about Identity and Reality

- Supervised by Professor Marianne Janack. Produced extended thesis investigating the role of narratives in shaping understandings of self and reality by linguistically and philosophically deconstructing the self-reflexive question “Who am I?”
- Integrated ancient Stoic principles and adages, modern theories of narrative self, and close readings of Seamus Heaney’s autobiographical poetry to propose hybrid framework for approaching modern metaphysics.

Hamilton College – Clinton, NY

- Worked under Professor Justin Clark to produce comprehensive survey and analysis of Plato's dialogues that identified portrayals of intellectual virtues, offering new interpretive framework for situating Socratic dialogues within history of virtue ethics and virtue epistemology.
- Improved long-term research efficiency and reliability by designing and maintaining well-documented data management system, ensuring organized and accessible records for ongoing and future scholarship.
