DIMENSIONED FLOOR PLAN

Design Concept: A Modern Mountain Alpine Haus

The beauty of the Rocky Mountains has been the inspirational focus for the Heidenreich family for many years. Their home reflects the tranquility of the great outdoors. The mountain house renovation will combine the existing first floor living space with a new style harmony that will combine warm, natural materials with sleek lines. The new custom window additions in every space will create breathtaking views. The open concept great room and kitchen add character by fostering an inviting atmosphere drawing people into conversation and movement. The interior connects the house to nature by using natural materials such as wood and stone. The earthy tones and finishes blend with nature by connecting the exterior with the interior. The fireplace is the focal point of the floor with its rich and warm smokey taupe, neutral tones that provide warmth and coziness views from every space. The sturdy slab stone at the front entrance adds repetition and a sense of warmth in a practical entryway. The high-end Kohler powder room products consist of a spacious warm wood vanity with a white Carrara marble countertop and a matching full wall backsplash. The bathroom has a comfort height for making it easier on the body. The fixtures and accessories are a vibrant modern brushed gold. The open kitchen has modern stainless appliances with wood crafted cabinetry and Cambria's stone full wall backsplash in sage. The island is adorned with a Nero Marquina marble green tint countertop that is found on the two walls of cabinets. This green hue is found throughout on furnishings and patterns on fabrics and materials which reflect the colors and textures of foliage. Together these elements create a blend of rustic charm and modern sophistication.
