

Bullseye

Bullseye, located at Snorrabraut 37 in Reykjavik, is the world's largest dart venue with over 40 auto-counting dartboards across three floors. It's ideal for corporate events, group outings, or a fun night out with friends.

The venue offers a variety of dart games, including Party Darts, Competitive Darts, and Classic Darts. On the upper level, you'll find eight dartboards that can be booked, while the ground floor offers ten more bookable boards. There are also non-bookable tables available for those who want to play casually.

For those looking for an extra special experience, the Blue Hall (an old cinema hall on the mezzanine floor) opens on weekends and before public holidays. Here, guests can enjoy 24 Fun Dart boards and a selection of tables exclusively for Blue Hall visitors. The Blue Hall creates a festive atmosphere perfect for group celebrations or a night out.

Bullseye isn't just about darts; it's also a great place to enjoy food and drinks. The venue offers pizzas, wings, draft beers, and expertly crafted cocktails. If you plan to dine while playing, booking a two-hour slot to make the most of your time is advisable. Whether you're grabbing a quick bite or settling in for a meal, the food complements the fun.

Ideal for dates, stag/hen parties, birthdays, or team-building events, Bullseye is a place where everyone can enjoy endless laughter and friendly competition. Darts is an activity that newcomers can quickly pick up, making it a perfect choice for groups with varying levels of experience.

Located centrally in Reykjavik, Bullseye is easy to add to your travel itinerary. While walk-ins are welcome, booking in advance is recommended, especially for larger groups. Reservations can be made through their website or by email.

Bullseye also hosts special events like the Icelandic Darts Championship, where top players from across the country compete. It's a fantastic way to experience the excitement of live darts competitions during your visit.
