Review Roundup: What The Internet's Saying About Republic

Posted by katrina.k in republic on Oct 22, 2014 4:54:00 PM

Here at Republic, our reward for our work is helping add value to our members' lives and making them happy while we do it. But it's always nice to see positive press as well! There's been so much lately, in fact, (what a good problem to have!) that we figured we should just put it all in one place.

Check out what some of our favorite bloggers and tech sites are saying, and poke around a bit while you're visiting them too. You might find other handy money-saving tips or even a chance to win a Moto E!

Clark Howard has featured Republic's phones and services before, but his latest post about us is a great reminder for anyone starting their holiday shopping early:

Republic Wireless is the best deal out there if your budget matters [...] In the years since they've been providing service, however, the newest versions of Republic Wireless smartphones have improved and are better at seamlessly moving from Wi-Fi to cellular service and data.

The College Investor recently reviewed Republic and declared us the winner of their Best Cell Phone Plans for College Students, ranking us above the Big Three when comparing phone cost, monthly cost, and coverage options. With many US college and university campuses offering students WiFi, a Republic phone is a great, affordable option:

For someone living on a college campus or medium to large city (where WiFi is everywhere) then the price and perks of Republic Wireless cannot be beat!

Forbes Magazine also thinks Republic is a great fit for students:

Republic is a very different kind of carrier – they eliminate all the things that drive people nutty about the big carriers such as contracts, counting minutes, texts and how much data you use [...] a great fit for teachers and students – 99% of college campuses are WiFi enabled as are many secondary schools.

We're calling our new Moto E the flip phone killer, but Living on the Cheap recommends Republic as a reliable alternative to traditional landline service too:

[I]f you walk out the door while you are on a WiFi call, the phone will switch to the cellular network and allow you to continue talking. This kind of flexibility makes for a lot of peace of mind...Republic hits the sweetest spot in cost and ease of use.

Bible Money Matters's review of Republic shares a little of our company history and the gives a detailed breakdown of our phones and service plans. They also made an unboxing video that shows off our super-cool green box and even goes through the Moto X's activation.

It ends up being cheaper than most of the other services that I've looked into, and if you have good WiFi coverage like I do, it can be considerably cheaper. I'd definitely recommend checking it out if you're looking to cut an out of control cell phone bill.

It's a perfect marriage of frugality and reliable cell service! [...] A match made in heaven!

And lastly (this is a fun one), Budgets are Sexy declared that we're their new favorite wireless carrier! (Woo hoo!)

I feel like I've stumbled across a gem here...

They're also giving away two new Republic Moto E smartphones with 3 months of free service - head over to their blog to learn more and enter to possibly win one!

So, there you have it - here's what all the cool kids are saying about us. If you know someone you think might be a good fit too, but is still on the fence, send 'em this blog to do the trick! And as always, share your thoughts over in the comments!
