Challenge Daily Spark (Microfiction) A complete or near complete scene/interaction in 150 words or less.

The smile faded from his face as he immediately stopped moving and stared right at the detective sitting across from him. “Nothing I tell you will change a thing. It doesn’t matter what I think. It doesn’t matter what I know. What matters is what you believe, because you have made up your mind already on what is right and what is wrong, what is true and what is false, who I am and what I have done. There is nothing I can say or do that would change your mind now that you have made it up, so there is no point in me even saying anything or trying in the first place. It would just be a waste of breath. So if you don't mind, I would like to be brought back to my little concrete cell and left alone.”

Silence. Then the detective move. “We’re done here.”

Kelly