

18 THINGS YOU NEVER NOTICED ABOUT BLUEY!

As an absolute Bluey fan, this sounds almost impossible to you. But how is it possible that I missed something about Bluey? Phew! You know how you can watch a thing over and over again and still miss some things, right? Well, here are 18 things you never noticed about Bluey.

Cats and dogs are enemies in Bluey's Universe -
https://youtu.be/Z9Fp8PEiA_c?si=gaDb9mxyVL0p96Gg

Remember the “snitch bluey” season in episode Tradies, where the girls went to the healer's office to snitch on the workers? That's where Bluey hints to us that these lovely dog characters are not as lovely as they are when it comes to cats. There is a painting in the corner of the healer's office. A closer look reveals that the dog in the painting holds what appears to be a dead cat. Quite the proof you need to know that dogs and cats were enemies in the past in Bluey's Universe, probably why we have never seen cats in the series.

Mum's Musical Tastes

Here's something you probably never noticed in Bluey. In the episode, we get a peek into Chilli's actual music vibe! That's for those of us who pay attention, of course. After her jog, Chilli's rocking a music player and on the cover is a dog version of the famous Pink Floyd's prism from The Dark Side of the Moon. Who knew Chilli's musical taste was so rock 'n' roll? Guess she's got more to her than just regular "mom duties."

Their names are from their furs

In Bluey's world, names are not just randomly picked. They are all picked according to the characters' fur colors! Take Bluey, for example; her name is a result of her fur. Imagine if she looked like Bingo and was still called Bluey, that would be a little odd, right? Then there's Chilli, whose darker fur tones make "Pepper" a perfect match. And don't forget Brandy, with her lighter hues, named after a drink as classy as her coat. Even Stripes' name is a shout-out to the banded patterns on his body. It's like the fur chooses the name!

Bluey is taking karate lessons

<https://www.buzzfeed.com/jenniferabidor/bluey-facts-disney-plus>

Bluey is secretly mastering the art of karate right under our noses. In “Bin Night,” we get a glimpse of Bluey's martial arts journey as she wears a white belt while helping with the bins. But wait, by the end of the episode, we see her in a yellow belt! That's right, she's progressing in her karate skills without a word of explanation. A sly way to show us that our favorite puppy is progressing in her karate skills so quickly.

Tooth Fairy Money

<https://www.buzzfeed.com/jenniferabidor/bluey-facts-disney-plus>

Bluey's tooth fairy money is more than just a simple five-dollar note—it's practically a character itself! In "Markets," Bluey is excited to spend her tooth fairy cash, and from there, the bill starts its wild journey. It gets passed around, finally landing in a street performer's hat. But here's the kicker: this bill keeps popping up! In "Dance Mode," it's back in the performer's hat, and later, in "The Quiet Game," it's used to pay for ice cream! Looks like Bluey's tooth fairy money is living its own little adventure through the city.

The License plate

Of course, you missed the Heeler family car's license plate, "419 HLR." At first glance, it seems pretty standard, but here's the twist! "HLR" clearly stands for Heeler, the family's breed. That's not all! The number "419" is a hexadecimal color code, "419fff," which happens to be the exact shade of blue that matches Bluey and Bandit's fur! So, this license plate isn't just a random detail. It's a sneaky nod to the family's name and their signature color. How clever!

Bluey's Australia World

<https://youtu.be/lzxsellbWUV4?si=c1mQka4DsUWWfKUH>

If you think Bluey's universe is just a cute dog-filled paradise, think again! There is some sneaky Aussie pride hidden in plain sight. Take Snickers' cap, for example, it's got a green design, a nod to Australia's national colors, seen in everything from the Acala pantha plant to the Australian flag. And here's a cool fact: the towel stripes in the Christmas swim episode are a replica of the Aussie flag! Bluey's creators are definitely proud that Bluey's universe is set in Australia. How many hidden Aussie references can you find?

The characters have the creator's name

<https://youtu.be/lzxsellbWUV4?si=c1mQka4DsUWWfKUH>

Here is another fun little detail you might not have noticed in Bluey. The terrier characters Joe, Dan, and Adam are named after the show's creator, Joe Brumm, and his real-life brothers! But the best part? Their personalities mirror the three siblings' childhood. The characters give us a playful peek into the creators' lives, almost like an allegory of their relationships as they grew up. It is like Joe and his brothers have secretly slipped themselves into the show, hiding behind those adorable terrier faces!

Fire Emblem

In the episode "Hammerban," while we are all distracted by Bingo and Bluey imagining their dream homes in the shopping cart, a hidden gem appears in the background. As the cart zooms down the aisle, take a closer look at items on the shelves, and you will spot something: "Dmitri," "Claude," and "Edelgard." These names belong to the house leaders from Fire Emblem: Three Houses, a beloved strategy game. It is a sneaky nod to the game, proving that even in a kids' show, the creators have their own gaming passions tucked away for us to find!

If you have gotten this far, then you must love Bluey as much as we do! Subscribe now, or your favorite shoe will get spoiled!

Low-budget fancy restaurant

<https://www.buzzfeed.com/jenniferabidor/bluey-facts-disney-plus>

Bluey and Bingo's "fancy restaurant" in the episode Fancy restaurant might look like a posh place for a date night, but take a closer look and you will find out it is more low-budget than you'd expect! As Bandit declares this to be the "fanciest restaurant in town," a string of fairy lights behind him flickers... and one by one, the bulbs start to burn out. Oops! Seems like even the fanciest spots need a little repair work. Who knew a "romantic dinner" could have such a sparky twist? Looks like the Healers' budget for ambiance didn't quite stretch that far!

Chimpy's tattoos

Did you ever notice Chimpy's tattoos? There's a tiger on one arm and two cherries on the other. But wait, there's a sweet twist: Chimpy's girlfriend is named Cherry, so those tattoos are basically his love letter to her! Forget roses, Chimpy's got a permanent symbol of affection on his arm. Who knew a tough-looking dog could be so romantic?

Bandit's love for Indiana Jones

<https://www.watchmojo.com/articles/top-10-things-you-missed-in-bluey>

Bandit's love for Indiana Jones is something you must have missed. Growing up in the '80s, it's no surprise that Bandit's adventures are sprinkled with "Indy" inspiration. In one episode, he tosses Bluey onto a beanbag for not having a ticket, which is a cheeky reference to Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade. And in "Yoga Ball," Bandit and the girls reenact Raiders of the Lost Ark, dodging boulders just like Indy. While we can't confirm Indiana Jones made Bandit an archaeologist, those nods sure make it feel like a tribute to the legendary adventurer!

Bluey's middle name

In the episode "Family Meeting," we learn that Bluey's middle name is Christine. The name's a sweet tribute from Bandit to his own mum, Nana, whose real name is Christine. So, Bluey shares names with Grandma Nana. But wait, it gets better? Bluey and Nana share more than just a name. From their quirky sense of humor to their love for adventure, these two have a special connection. It is like Bandit built Bluey with a dash of his mum's personality sprinkled in.

Bluey's friendly doodle

<https://www.buzzfeed.com/jenniferabidor/bluey-facts-disney-plus>

Bluey's friendly doodle is a sweet Easter egg that you most definitely missed. If you look closely at multiple episodes, you will spot a drawing Bluey made of her and her French-Canadian friend Jean-Luc. This adorable sketch pops up in "Bingo" and "The Show," hinting just how much that camping trip and their budding friendship meant to her. The drawing on the wall in the background speaks volumes, showing us that Bluey's bond with Jean-Luc is unforgettable, even if it is only shown through a simple, colorful doodle! It is the perfect blend of heartwarming and fun.

The Wiggles on Bluey

<https://www.buzzfeed.com/jenniferabidor/bluey-facts-disney-plus>

In the episode "Phones," when Grandad comes over for playtime, you might notice something fun in the background! If you pay a little more attention, you will find a signed photo of The Wiggles—but with a twist. The Wiggles' iconic crew are all reimagined as dogs! It's a cheeky nod to Australian kids' entertainment, especially since Anthony Field, the leader of The Wiggles, voices both Postie and Rusty's father in Bluey. This rare appearance is easy to miss, but once you spot it, it's a delightful Easter egg connecting two beloved Australian shows!

Chilli's Territory

<https://www.buzzfeed.com/jenniferabidor/bluey-facts-disney-plus>

In the episode “Grandad,” we get a cheeky little peek into Chilli’s wild past. As she chases after her dad, Bluey, and Bingo through the woods, something sneaky catches their eye: a tree with Chilli’s name carved into it! This little piece of history gives us an insight into her younger days. Can you imagine Chilli running around, marking her territory like a young pup? It’s a subtle, yet adorable reminder that even our calm, collected mom had her own wild side back in the day. Who knew Chilli was once a little rebel?

Long Dog

<https://www.watchmojo.com/articles/top-10-things-you-missed-in-bluey>

Now, let’s talk about Long Dogs – those sneaky, adorable little characters that hide throughout Bluey, waiting for you to find them! These striped pups come in all shapes and colors, popping up in the background like secret agents on a mission. In the first episode, a blue Long Dog lounges on a shelf with other toys. Blink, and you’ll miss one wearing a Santa hat in “Christmas Swim,” or even a diaper in “Baby Race!” It’s a fun game for fans on a rewatch – how many Long Dogs can you spot? Keep your eyes peeled!

Stranger Things Talk

<https://www.watchmojo.com/articles/top-10-things-you-missed-in-bluey>

In one episode of Seesaw, Chilli and Pom Pom’s mom casually drops a line about the “From Russia with love” teaser. Sounds harmless, right? But if you’re a Stranger Things fan, that’s a sly nod to the Stranger Things universe! So, what if the characters from Hawkins are actually Bluey dogs? Imagine Hopper as a gruff bulldog, Eleven as an adorable, scrappy terrier, and of course, the Demogorgon, definitely some scary-looking hound!
