

SONOS

Color in concert. Color in contrast.

For Mette and Rolf Hay, co-founders of HAY—a Danish furnishings brand based in Copenhagen, Denmark—design is a global language. Not surprisingly, their inclusive aesthetic has enabled them to transcend borders and become one of the world's most renowned and inspirational voices in design.

Founded in 2002, HAY draws inspiration from the stable structures of architecture and the dynamics of fashion. For Sonos to add color to our speakers—which we design to blend naturally into their surroundings—we knew we would have to strike a similarly delicate balance.

"I believe that each object has its own set of colors, they can harmonize with a space or create contrast for a stronger impact."
—Mette Hay

Exploring the relationship between sound and home design, Sonos and HAY have reimagined Sonos One in five colors from HAY's 2018 palette: Pale Yellow, Soft Pink, Vibrant Red, Forest Green, and Light Grey.

Behind the scenes with Amp

What do waffles, banana plugs, and black painted circuit boards have in common? They were all part of the process to develop Amp, our new versatile amplifier for powering all of your entertainment. In order to surpass Connect:Amp, which has remained popular since its debut in 2005, we knew we couldn't just make tweaks and upgrades—we had to start from scratch.

Sonos Pro Tip: Volume Limit

Set a max volume for each of your speakers and ensure you don't accidentally blast out the neighbors. Tap More, then Settings, then Room Settings. Select a speaker and then tap Volume Limit to set the maximum volume.

Alexa Skill of the Week

Translated
After enabling the Translated skill, you can ask Alexa to translate short phrases into 37 languages.

"Alexa, ask Translated how to say 'What's your favorite song?' in Spanish."

You never know how Alexa will answer until you try.

"Alexa, what's your favorite color?"
