

SONOS

Tidy Up and Retune with Trueplay

You scrubbed, dusted and vacuumed away a long winter. Maybe you even rearranged some furniture. After all that spring cleaning, now is a great time to Trueplay your Sonos system and tune the speakers to your newly-spotless room. Trueplay analyzes the room size and layout, speaker placement and other acoustic factors to ensure you're experiencing spring's best albums, books, and baseball games at their fullest, most vibrant best.

If you haven't spruced up for spring yet, don't feel bad about procrastinating. According to our Music Makes it Home study, 8 out of 10 people said that chores suck less with music. So before you break out the mop and bucket, we recommend finding just the right playlist.

Andrew Bird on Trueplay

Musician Andrew Bird likens Trueplay to his "superpower"—an ability to map his environment with music by tuning into the acoustics of a room. Watch him in action as he echolocates his Los Feliz home.

Sonos Pro Tip

After Trueplay, it's possible to adjust the EQ settings (like treble and bass), if desired, so you can enjoy your personal acoustic preferences while using Trueplay as a starting point.

Go to the More tab, then tap Settings > Room Settings.

Alexa Skill of the Week

Let's Do Chores

Get the whole family involved with the cleaning by making chore assignment into a game.

"Alexa, tell Let's Do Chores let's do this."

You never know how Alexa will answer until you try.

"Alexa, can you clean my house?"
